HIS LIFE HANGS IN BALANCE

HIS CONDITION PRECARIOUS

Suffering excruciating pain from the effects of a most brutal and cowardly assault, John Greer lies in a dark and miserable looking room on Market street at the rear of what is generally known as Schlegel's fish and oyster market.

Although in this agonizing condition since last Saturday night, information pertaining to the deed and its perpetrators did not reach police headquarters until late yesterday afternoon. Why it was not reported is a mystery.

Health Officer Burgess made the discovery and under peculiar circumstances. Having been notified that from the house in which the man suffers, sickening fumes and air foul in the extreme have been coming in volumes for several days, Mr. Burgess went to make an investigation and while there found the poor unfortunate creature.

In possession of the facts as given by the officer a News Review reporter called at the uninviting apartment and the sight that met his gaze almost beggars description. There lay the man on a cot writhing in pain. With his eyes blackened and swollen nearly shut and his other features showing evidences of pain and ill usage he tried but in vain to present an appearance not warranting fears for his ultimate recovery. To the questions of the reporter he answered almost inaudibly and then only with the greatest effort.

"Why I am in this awful condition I hardly know," said he. "I don't remember it at all. Last Saturday night about 12 o'clock I was walking up Second street with Tom Boyd and two women. From then until Monday afternoon my mind was a blank. They tell me that three fellows jumped on and commenceed pounding me until they knocked me to the ground, unconscious; also that I was carried to this room by two men whose names I don't know. If the men who assaulted me were after money, they got left, because I never carry more than a dollar. I would not know the fellows, but think that I remember the spot where they jumped on me. It was terribly dark and they must have jumped on me from behind. My! but my head hurts. Please don't ask any more questions. I know that I am going to die."

One of the women that was with him at the time of the assault is now taking care of him. She talked freely, but was unable to throw any light upon the matter. She said, however, that she would know the men if they were brought before her.

The man has been under the care of two physicians and one of them stated last evening that the patient has a possible chance for recovery, but may take a sudden turn for the worse and die within a few minutes. It seems that the blood has rushed to the sufferer's head, and if it is not started in circulation the result will eventually be fatal.

Notwithstanding that the man stated positively that a policeman was present at the time of the trouble, around headquarters all knowledge of the affair is denied.

Chief Thompson is making an investigation, but has little grounds to work on, owing to the victim not being able to describe the men who made the attack.

FROM DEATH BY LIGHTNING ON PLEASANT HEIGHTS.

George W. Ashbaugh's Residence Struck and Two Persons Shocked.

A bolt of lightning alighted in the yard of George W. Ashbaugh yesterday afternoon, and several persons had narrow escapes from death, in addition to the destruction of considerable property.

The lightning was attracted to a steel wire which was used to keep grape vines in place. The vines were torn down and some damage done to the arbors.

George McCartney was in his barn nearby and was severely shocked. It was some time before he recovered and he still feels the effects of the electricity in one of his legs.

Mrs. William McCartney, whose home is in the lot adjoining, was busy in her kitchen, and at the time the flash came had a large steel spoon in her hand. The spoon was sent flying across the room and the lady was shocked, in addition to being badly frightened.

ASK FOR PROXIES

Trenton Potteries Company to Ratify Action of the Board of Directors.

Trenton, June 14.—In accordance with the recent decision of the directors of the Trenton Potteries company, recommending the adoption of a plan for the payment of the back dividends on the preferred stock, amounting to 44 per cent of that issue, or $550,000, the company has issued a call for proxies for the ratification of the agreement.

This provides that the accumulated preferred dividends be discharged by the issue of certificates bearing 4 per cent interest to be paid out of the current earnings of the company. Such interest, however, is not cumulative, but shall take precedence over the dividends on the preferred stock.

It is expected that the plan for refunding the back dividends will become operative July 1.

The certificates will be redeemed from current surplus or earnings, beginning January next, when $255,000 will be set aside and an equal sum each year until the issue is cancelled.

Prudence was arrested by Constable Powell and arraigned before the squire. He offered to give the Halfhill woman $25 in cash and support the child or to marry her, but she would not consent, asking $200. Being unable to make an agreement he was bound over to common pleas court under $500 bond. Sheriff Leonard escorted him to Lisbon this afternoon.

BOTH SIDES HEARD

Controversey Between Pleasant Heights Citizens and the East Liverpool Street Railway Company Grows Interesting.

A DENIAL IS ENTERED

That the Company Will Neither Build Nor Let Others Do So.

DANGERS ARE THE BAR

Jason H. Brookes, attorney for the East Liverpool Railway company, when interviewed by a News Review reporter today, presented the company's position regarding the Pleasant Heights extension. He said:

"The impressions that have been circulated to the effect that the East Liverpool Railway company will neither build the Pleasant Heights extension nor permit others to build it is entirely erroneous. I am authorized to say that if the Messrs. Macrum, Ashbaugh and Vodrey and the land companies in which they are interested wish to build a line from the Diamond to Pleasant Heights, the East Liverpool Railway company will place no obstruction in their way, but will facilitate and aid them in every way in its power.

"It is well known that the company already has over $5,000 invested in the bridge over Carpenter's run on Pleasant street and in the purchases which the company made continuing Pleasant street to Lisbon road. These are permanent improvements made at the expense of the company, and of which the city reaps largely the benefits, and the company is willing to make satisfactory arrangements with respect to these improvements looking to their use by whoever builds the line.

"For ourselves, our experience on Calcutta road has been quite enough and has convinced us that a road to Pleasant Heights would be an unsafe line to operate. The proposition to contribute $5,000, which these gentlemen say they are willing to make towards building the extension, is little inducement to the company. One accident on the Calcutta road has already cost, directly or indirectly, over $5,000, and there were but three passengers on that car. A runaway on the Lisbon road, with a loaded car, would cause damage enough to bankrupt the road, and the attorneys who plead so vigorously for council to compel the building of this line would be among the most ready and willing to prosecute for damages.

"It is well enough to say that the people they represent 'are willing to take the risks'; but the attorneys well know that as soon as a passenger pays his fare, the company, under the law, must practically insure his safety during the entire trip.

"The present proposition to pay $5,000, it should be understood, it not made by the Pleasant Heights Land company, with whom the original proposition was in force, but by those

By Citizens at the Treatment of the Council's Order by Mr. Healy.

ACTION WAS NOT HASTY

Those members of council who are interested in the affairs of the city to a sufficient degree to desire the enforcement of existing ordinances were surprised at the apparent indifference with which Manager L. W. Healy treated the late order coming from the council through its clerk.

Early in the month of April residents of Pleasant Heights and several thousand other citizens who had become thoroughly tired of the long delay in the construction of the Pleasant Heights extension of the East Liverpool railway started a movement with the end in view of compelling the company to build the line.

The services of two attorneys were secured, who, after going carefully over the franchise under which the company operates its entire system, had no hesitancy in giving as their legal opinion that the ordinance could be enforced.

When the management of the company became aware of the movement and what it would probably lead to it immediately instructed its attorneys to take steps which would prevent the enforcement of the ordinance as it appears upon the books of the city—as binding an obligation as was ever enacted.

At a special meeting of the council held for other purposes there appeared a representative of the street railway. No notice had been given to either the interested parties nor the council. This agent asked that council instruct its solicitor to prepare an ordinance amending the franchise so that the line intended for the accommodation of Pleasant Heights residents should end where Pleasant street joins the Lisbon road, a proposition, by the way, which would be of no benefit to those of the citizens whom this extension was intended to accommodate. The council gave the instructions pleaded for, but at the next meeting thereafter tabled the ordinance, for the very good reason that the street railway would, by its provisions, be relieved from constructing a line to a portion of the city where several hundred taxpayers had invested money with the understanding that they would have means provided for their getting to and from the city proper.

Several of the residents of the Pleasant Heights district were interviewed by a News Review reporter this morning, and not a few expressed indignation at the remarks said to have been made by Mr. Healy yesterday. Among

MANUFACTURERS SILENT ON CONFERENCE RESULTS

A meeting of the members of the Western Manufacturing Potters' association was held in the Potters' club rooms last evening, the session being the most important that has been held by the association for a year. The meeting was for the purpose of hearing the communication received by Secretary W. E. Wells from Secretary Thomas J. Duffy, of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. This communication was received by Mr. Wells early in the week, as exclusively reported in this paper at the time.

It is stated that every manufacturer in the city was represented at the session, while those from out of town were: Harry D. Wintringer of Steubenville; Charles W. Franzheim, Wheeling; John Wick, Kittanning, Pa.; Will S. George and O. C. Walker, East Palestine; F. E. Davis and R. Heapes, of the Shenango Potteries company, New Castle, Pa.; L. K. Force, of the Summit China company, Akron.

Direct information concerning this most important meeting is absolutely withheld, as the lips of each person present are sealed as to what action was taken on the communication. However, the announcement has been made through an unofficial source that a conference committee was appointed, but the names of the members of this committee will not be presented to the public until after an answer has been forwarded by the association to the Brotherhood.

Secretary W. Edward Wells, of the association, when seen today, would not talk about the session, saying that, probably at some future time the association might have a statement to make, but there was nothing to be given out just at this time. "The manufacturers do not propose to agitate any friction," said Mr. Wells, "and for that reason we prefer to keep our business quiet."

President Joseph G. Lee could not be seen today, as he with two other manufacturers, one of whom was from out of town, were busily engaged with some detail work at the office of the association with Actuary C. E. Macrum.

COUNTY BOARD HAS TROUBLES

THE EQUALIZERS CONSIDERING ABOUT 100 CLAIMS.

Excessive Valuation Is the Charge Ppt Forward By Taxpayers.

Lisbon, June 14.—(Special)—The county board of equalization is having unusual trouble to adjust the property values in the county. About 100 claims of excessive valuation have already been received. Many of these appear valid. It is very difficult to adjust them as the total valuation can not be changed and when the estimate on one property is lowered that on another must be raised.

Ten days' notice is given and the property owners have a chance to appear before the board and protest. The board say that they are never troubled urging anyone to come on this errand.

STRUCK BY LIMITED

TWO WOMEN AT SALEM NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH.

One Is Rendered Unconscious and Receives Severe Injuries

Salem, June 14.—(Special)—Mrs. W. A. Tetlow and niece, Miss Leona Gaunt, narrowly escaped a most horrible death this morning. They had driven up Depot street to the railroad track where they were compelled to stop, an excursion train blocking the road. After waiting a few minutes this train pulled out and Mrs. Tetlow gave the horse a cut with a whip, starting the animal across the track. When but fairly started both the occupants were horrified at seeing the Limited express charging at them at an awful rate of speed.

It was then to late to turn back and the horse was given another lash. He resonded by a heroic jump and cleared the track, but, however, not without injury to the women. The front of the engine struck the rear wheels of the buggy, turning it over and over a dozen times. Friends rushed to their rescue and found Miss Gaunt not badly hurt but Mrs. Tetlow in an unconscious condition. Medical aid soon revived her and it is now thought, although her injuries are very painful, that she was not fatally hurt.

BIG PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED

Rev. W. H. Gladden Gives Methodist Protestants Something to Think About.

THE CHURCHES ARE TOO POOR

Ministers Who Have to Teach School to Add to Scanty Salaries.

A $1,000 CHURCH FOR $10

Pittsburg, June 14.—The spectacle of two pastors so poorly paid that they are compelled to teach in the public schools to make a living, the offer to sell a church that cost $1,000 for $10, and the prospect of losing three or four congregations to the Methodist Episcopal church are a few of the interesting features that are promised at the coming annual session of the M. P. conference at Knoxville.

This stratling state of affairs is being brought to the attention of the conference through a letter just issued by Rev. W. H. Gladden, of East Liverpool, who is the conference president. The letter on next Monday morning will come up for consideration at the preachers' meeting in the Methodist Protestant building, Fifth avenue. Reorganization and the consolidation of perhaps a dozen of the weaker churches throughout the conference will be among the most serious questions to be considered at the Knoxville meeting. Mr. Gladden says in his letter:

"At Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, two charges but four miles apart, we have the spectacle of both pastors spending six hours a day in the school room for a large part of the year, to supplement their meager support—$400 or $500 each a year—with the wages of the school teacher, that they may get a living. Two pastors employed in this questionable manner, while other charges are entirely without pastoral supply, the laborers being so few.

"Now, it seems to me that if these two charges, Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, which are but four miles apart, could be consolidated, a comfortable support could be given to one man for all his time, which I think would be much more effective than, say, half time from both."

Mr. Gladden continues in his letter: "In Washington sub-district, in the western part of Greene county, we have four churches, Fairview, Mt. Zion, Bethel and Pleasant Hill, and an interest in a union church at Long Run, none of which has had a regular pastor for several years. We are in danger of losing several of these appointments, where we have thousands of dollars worth of property and a hundred members, at least, to the West Virginia conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. Overtures are now being made, and listened to by many, with this end in view.

"One sale has actually been attempted, that of the Pleasant Hill church for $10, which cost us $1,000. These people have been told that we have abandoned them; many believe it, and I confess it looks very much like it; but a little while longer and all our interests in that community will be lost. On the Waynesburg and Morrisville charge attention is also needed.

"I would suggest that Rev. R. B. Whitehead, pastor of Monongahela circuit, call a conference of all the pastors in this district, and at least one delegate from each society, to take take these matters into consideration and formulate propositions for the consideration of the fourth quarterly conference of this district, looking to a readjustment of our shattered boundaries.

"In the Connellsville sub-district similar conditions obtain. Fairchance and Monroe circuit is at this time dissolving, happily through its own prosperity. The Cool Spring church, an appointment now attached to East End, Uniontown, might be cared for in the readjustment of the old Fairchance and Monroe circuit. I would like to ask Rev. George W. Morris, of Connellsville, to call a convention like those I have already suggested. In the New Brighton sub-district, Trumbull circuit and Turnersville need similar attention, neither of them being able to support a pastor."

Mr. Gladden's letter has occasioned great surprise throughout the conference, and it is more than probable that the changes the president has suggested will be made without hesitation.

COUNTY BOARD HAS TROUBLES

Excessive Valuation Is the Charge Ppt Forward By Taxpayers.

Lisbon, June 14.—(Special)—The county board of equalization is having unusual trouble to adjust the property values in the county. About 100 claims of excessive valuation have already been received. Many of these appear valid. It is very difficult to adjust them as the total valuation can not be changed and when the estimate on one property is lowered that on another must be raised.

Ten days' notice is given and the property owners have a chance to appear before the board and protest. The board say that they are never troubled urging anyone to come on this errand.

One Is Rendered Unconscious and Receives Severe Injuries

Salem, June 14.—(Special)—Mrs. W. A. Tetlow and niece, Miss Leona Gaunt, narrowly escaped a most horrible death this morning. They had driven up Depot street to the railroad track where they were compelled to stop, an excursion train blocking the road. After waiting a few minutes this train pulled out and Mrs. Tetlow gave the horse a cut with a whip, starting the animal across the track. When but fairly started both the occupants were horrified at seeing the Limited express charging at them at an awful rate of speed.

It was then to late to turn back and the horse was given another lash. He resonded by a heroic jump and cleared the track, but, however, not without injury to the women. The front of the engine struck the rear wheels of the buggy, turning it over and over a dozen times. Friends rushed to their rescue and found Miss Gaunt not badly hurt but Mrs. Tetlow in an unconscious condition. Medical aid soon revived her and it is now thought, although her injuries are very painful, that she was not fatally hurt.

BIG PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED

Rev. W. H. Gladden Gives Methodist Protestants Something to Think About.

Ministers Who Have to Teach School to Add to Scanty Salaries.

A $1,000 CHURCH FOR $10

Pittsburg, June 14.—The spectacle of two pastors so poorly paid that they are compelled to teach in the public schools to make a living, the offer to sell a church that cost $1,000 for $10, and the prospect of losing three or four congregations to the Methodist Episcopal church are a few of the interesting features that are promised at the coming annual session of the M. P. conference at Knoxville.

This stratling state of affairs is being brought to the attention of the conference through a letter just issued by Rev. W. H. Gladden, of East Liverpool, who is the conference president. The letter on next Monday morning will come up for consideration at the preachers' meeting in the Methodist Protestant building, Fifth avenue. Reorganization and the consolidation of perhaps a dozen of the weaker churches throughout the conference will be among the most serious questions to be considered at the Knoxville meeting. Mr. Gladden says in his letter:

"At Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, two charges but four miles apart, we have the spectacle of both pastors spending six hours a day in the school room for a large part of the year, to supplement their meager support—$400 or $500 each a year—with the wages of the school teacher, that they may get a living. Two pastors employed in this questionable manner, while other charges are entirely without pastoral supply, the laborers being so few.

"Now, it seems to me that if these two charges, Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, which are but four miles apart, could be consolidated, a comfortable support could be given to one man for all his time, which I think would be much more effective than, say, half time from both."

Mr. Gladden continues in his letter: "In Washington sub-district, in the western part of Greene county, we have four churches, Fairview, Mt. Zion, Bethel and Pleasant Hill, and an interest in a union church at Long Run, none of which has had a regular pastor for several years. We are in danger of losing several of these appointments, where we have thousands of dollars worth of property and a hundred members, at least, to the West Virginia conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. Overtures are now being made, and listened to by many, with this end in view.

"One sale has actually been attempted, that of the Pleasant Hill church for $10, which cost us $1,000. These people have been told that we have abandoned them; many believe it, and I confess it looks very much like it; but a little while longer and all our interests in that community will be lost. On the Waynesburg and Morrisville charge attention is also needed.

"I would suggest that Rev. R. B. Whitehead, pastor of Monongahela circuit, call a conference of all the pastors in this district, and at least one delegate from each society, to take take these matters into consideration and formulate propositions for the consideration of the fourth quarterly conference of this district, looking to a readjustment of our shattered boundaries.

"In the Connellsville sub-district similar conditions obtain. Fairchance and Monroe circuit is at this time dissolving, happily through its own prosperity. The Cool Spring church, an appointment now attached to East End, Uniontown, might be cared for in the readjustment of the old Fairchance and Monroe circuit. I would like to ask Rev. George W. Morris, of Connellsville, to call a convention like those I have already suggested. In the New Brighton sub-district, Trumbull circuit and Turnersville need similar attention, neither of them being able to support a pastor."

Mr. Gladden's letter has occasioned great surprise throughout the conference, and it is more than probable that the changes the president has suggested will be made without hesitation.

NEVILLE INSTITUTE

The annual meeting of the trustees of the Neville Institute of the East End was held a few days ago, but there was not much business for the officers to transact. The most important matter attended to was that of electing a teacher for the new school term, and this position was given to Mr. Fisher, at a salary of $45 a month. He has had the school for the past two terms and has proved himself to be a capable instructor.

No improvements will be made about the building this summer, as several hundred dollars were spent last year for new furniture and other matters. The school will be opened in September, and will have an enrollment of not less than 50 scholars.

AN OIL SHED BURNED

Fire in Calhoun's Addition That Came Near Resulting Seriously.

A fire that might have resulted more seriously than it did occurred yesterday afternoon at the residence of Michael Silwell in Calhoun's addition. Mr. Stilwell was in a small outbuilding for boiling linseed oil, which is used by the pottery printers, and the intense heat set fire to the oil. The small building was practically destroyed, and the flames commenced to consume the coal house, and later the fence, leading to the house, caught fire. Several men in the vicinity of the fire saw the flames, and procuring tubs, carried sufficient water to extinguish to flames.

The fence was knocked down, and this prevented the flames from touching the residence. Mr. Stilwell was severely burned about the hands.

ANIMAL IMITATIVENESS.

How a Beggar's Dog Grows to Be Like His Master.

"One of the most curious traits to be found in the animal nature," said an observant citizen, "is that which grows out of the unconscious imitativeness of creatures of the lower order. I have observed many instances of where the creatures of a lower order have taken on the characteristics in some noticeable degree of members of the human family. One might know, for instance, the beggar's dog from the look of the dog, from the droop of the eye, the pathetic hang of the lip and a certain general air of despondency and hopelessness which seems to speak in the very nature of the animal. I mention the beggar's dog because it is a familiar example. The beggar's dog never looks cheerful, never smiles, never frolics, but simply sits by his master and broods and begs for whatever charity may give.

"I have seen the dog character molded under happier influences, and the dog became more cheerful. He was a light hearted, free and easy sort of creature and seemed to get something of the sunnier side of things. I am almost tempted to say that if you will show me a man's dog I will tell you what manner of man the owner is, with particular reference to temperament and his moods. The melancholy man, the man who grovels mentally along the gloomier groves, the pessimistic man who is always looking at the dark side of the picture, all the men who come within these unhappy classifications rarely own a cheerful dog. The dog unconsciously takes to the ways of the master and in his moods imitates the master's way of thinking.

"But turn to the dog of the jolly, cheerful fellow. Watch him show his teeth in laughter when the master approaches. He is darting across the yard and dancing and frisking around the master's feet in the happiest way imaginable, and he is up to all kinds of pranks and does all kinds of little things to indicate the good nature that is in him. He does as his master does and seems to take the same general view of life. These are small things, I guess, but they show just how important one's way of thinking may influence one's dog and change his whole view of life."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ART OF CARICATURE

EVOLUTION AND INFLUENCE OF THE NEWSPAPER CARTOON.

The story is told of an abbe of the seventeenth century who was as deformed in figure as he was ridiculous in dress, and as sensitive about his physical deformity as he was vain of his eccentric attire, that while serving mass one morning he observed a smile of contempt on the face of one of the courtiers present and determined to avenge himself by serving a process upon him for appearance in court the following day.

The offender, M. de Lasson by name, knowing that things would go hard with him unless he could show some reason for his mirth, made a hasty sketch of the hunchback abbe, exaggerating in size the six black caps and the waistcoats in which he was wont to appear, and when he was solemnly asked to show cause for his unseemly mirth and indignity to the holy church he suddenly displayed before his judges the caricature of the abbe as his "excuse." The likeness was so excellent and the cartoon so grotesque that the entire court fell to laughing, and the accused was liberated without a reprimand.

This is the first authentic case of the power of the cartoon in a hall of justice, but it illustrates the power of the pencil in depicting the follies of the foolish and the affectations of the artificial.

There is no telling when the art of caricature began. There are a number of grotesques that have come down to us from earliest Egyptian times. The Greeks employed pictures to emphasize their satire, and so did the Romans. All through the middle ages there were numberless examples of "grotesqueries" which, curiously enough, were used in enforcing the doctrines of the church by means of satirizing the devil. But the eighteenth century was the heyday of the cartoon.

Beginning in France and overrunning into Holland and thence across the channel into England, the flood of caricaturists carried everything before it, and it is safe to say that we read the history of the times with clearer vision and with more accuracy of detail for the mirror which caricaturists held up to reflect the striking peculiarities of the men and events passing before it.

Gautier mentions a Spanish cartoonist, Francisco Gaya y Lucientes, a mixture of Rembrandt, Watteau and Rabelais, who preceded the two great caricaturists of the latter half of the eighteenth century, George Cruikshank in England and M. Charlet in France. Charlet is known as the father of modern social caricature and holds as good title to his position as does Philipau to that of the father of comic journalism, with Le Charivari, the strongest paper of its kind. Then came Punch in England, which still retains its subtitle of the London Charivari, for years the faithful if not the most highly polished reflecter of British life. Upon its staff John Leech, Richard Doyle, John Fenniel, George du Maurier and a dozen men of lesser name kept Great Britain in good humor for two generations.

It has been reserved for America, however, to bring forth a new race of caricaturists, which for lack of a better title may be called the personal cartoonists, men who seize upon the characteristics of an individual and so exaggerate them that the subjects of the cartoons are known by the most prominent features in their physical, mental or moral makeup.

True there was one man in London a hundred years ago, Gillray by name, who had this faculty of dissecting his subject until he found his weakest point and then unmercifully pricking it with his drawing pencil, but with him the race died out, to be reincarnated in America. Gillray was a close observer of people and events. He would sit in his publisher's window and watch the fops of the court as they passed and fasten in his memory every feature by which a man would be recognized by his acquaintances. He remembered every story that related to the traits of character of those in the public eye, and the St. James street of 1800 is faithfully reproduced in his art.

Perhaps we Americans look at the droll side of life more than other people, but certain it is we have more and better cartoonists than elsewhere. The very quickness with which we see the point of a joke demands equal facility in portraying drollery in a cartoon. We sketch boldly and leave much of the unnecessary detail to our slower cousins. Then, too, our public events happen with such startling rapidity that a cartoon of yesterday's doings would be flat today, and we must keep very much alive and be ready for a political change overnight.

In other words, the alert American must have depicted in his cartoon the very traits of character that have made him what he is, the quickest and brightest of men.—Thomas Nast in New York News.

EVOLUTION AND INFLUENCE OF THE NEWSPAPER CARTOON.

The story is told of an abbe of the seventeenth century who was as deformed in figure as he was ridiculous in dress, and as sensitive about his physical deformity as he was vain of his eccentric attire, that while serving mass one morning he observed a smile of contempt on the face of one of the courtiers present and determined to avenge himself by serving a process upon him for appearance in court the following day.

The offender, M. de Lasson by name, knowing that things would go hard with him unless he could show some reason for his mirth, made a hasty sketch of the hunchback abbe, exaggerating in size the six black caps and the waistcoats in which he was wont to appear, and when he was solemnly asked to show cause for his unseemly mirth and indignity to the holy church he suddenly displayed before his judges the caricature of the abbe as his "excuse." The likeness was so excellent and the cartoon so grotesque that the entire court fell to laughing, and the accused was liberated without a reprimand.

This is the first authentic case of the power of the cartoon in a hall of justice, but it illustrates the power of the pencil in depicting the follies of the foolish and the affectations of the artificial.

There is no telling when the art of caricature began. There are a number of grotesques that have come down to us from earliest Egyptian times. The Greeks employed pictures to emphasize their satire, and so did the Romans. All through the middle ages there were numberless examples of "grotesqueries" which, curiously enough, were used in enforcing the doctrines of the church by means of satirizing the devil. But the eighteenth century was the heyday of the cartoon.

Beginning in France and overrunning into Holland and thence across the channel into England, the flood of caricaturists carried everything before it, and it is safe to say that we read the history of the times with clearer vision and with more accuracy of detail for the mirror which caricaturists held up to reflect the striking peculiarities of the men and events passing before it.

Gautier mentions a Spanish cartoonist, Francisco Gaya y Lucientes, a mixture of Rembrandt, Watteau and Rabelais, who preceded the two great caricaturists of the latter half of the eighteenth century, George Cruikshank in England and M. Charlet in France. Charlet is known as the father of modern social caricature and holds as good title to his position as does Philipau to that of the father of comic journalism, with Le Charivari, the strongest paper of its kind. Then came Punch in England, which still retains its subtitle of the London Charivari, for years the faithful if not the most highly polished reflecter of British life. Upon its staff John Leech, Richard Doyle, John Fenniel, George du Maurier and a dozen men of lesser name kept Great Britain in good humor for two generations.

It has been reserved for America, however, to bring forth a new race of caricaturists, which for lack of a better title may be called the personal cartoonists, men who seize upon the characteristics of an individual and so exaggerate them that the subjects of the cartoons are known by the most prominent features in their physical, mental or moral makeup.

True there was one man in London a hundred years ago, Gillray by name, who had this faculty of dissecting his subject until he found his weakest point and then unmercifully pricking it with his drawing pencil, but with him the race died out, to be reincarnated in America. Gillray was a close observer of people and events. He would sit in his publisher's window and watch the fops of the court as they passed and fasten in his memory every feature by which a man would be recognized by his acquaintances. He remembered every story that related to the traits of character of those in the public eye, and the St. James street of 1800 is faithfully reproduced in his art.

Perhaps we Americans look at the droll side of life more than other people, but certain it is we have more and better cartoonists than elsewhere. The very quickness with which we see the point of a joke demands equal facility in portraying drollery in a cartoon. We sketch boldly and leave much of the unnecessary detail to our slower cousins. Then, too, our public events happen with such startling rapidity that a cartoon of yesterday's doings would be flat today, and we must keep very much alive and be ready for a political change overnight.

In other words, the alert American must have depicted in his cartoon the very traits of character that have made him what he is, the quickest and brightest of men.—Thomas Nast in New York News.

Rome's Aqueducts.

The eight aqueducts of ancient Rome brought 40,000,000 gallons of water a day into the city. Had the Romans been aware that water always rises to its own level these huge erections on arches seventy feet nigh need never have been built.

When the Curtain Falls.

Your death and my death are mainly of importance to ourselves. The black plumes will be stripped off our hearses within the hour, tears will dry, hurt hearts close again, our graves grow level with the churchyard, and, although we are away, the world wags on. It does not miss us, and those who are near us when the first strangeness of vacancy wears off will not miss us much either.—Alexander Smith in "Dreamthorp."

Punctuate It.

Take this sentence, printed nakedly: "It was and I said not of." As it stands it is enough to give the reader vertigo before he grasps its import. Properly stopped and buoyed with commas, it is a perfectly simple and natural sentence, as you will see when you have got the grip of your senses.—London Chronicle.

The Dress Is the Thing.

"She's going in for athletics, she says."

"What particular kind of athletics?"

"Oh, she won't settle that until she has studied up the various costumes."—Chicago Post.

Boy—Not very willing, sir.—Boston Post.

Evidence abounds that the Boers so lately in arms against Great Britain are accepting peace terms in good faith and manifesting an eagerness to get back to their old homes and begin the work of repairing war's waste as soon as possible. The outlook for the British is thus rendered bright. So long as both sides to the peace are anxious to carry out the agreement the work of reconstruction ought to be comparatively easy. Boers and British will have to live together in the Transvaal, and the more friendly the races remain with each other the better it will be for both of them. The chances are that a good deal of progress will be made by the end of the present year in removing the evidences of the war. One of the first effects of the peace will be a reopening of the mines and an increase in the gold output of that rich field.

That big total for the two Republican candidates for Congress in the recent election in Oregon is going to detract from the interest of the congressional canvass throughout the country this year. The Democrats now see that their chances for victory are hopeless, and they will not make such a fight as they threatened before that canvass to do. As Oregon went on the national expansion question, which will be the great issue in the canvass throughout the country, so will go the nation. This beats the Democracy for the 1902 canvass at least.

If, as is asserted, there are 100,000 children in the Indian territory, growing up without the benefit of the public schools, the matter is one which should receive the immediate attention of the government. To neglect the schools is to cultivate ignorance and pile up trouble for the future. There is no principle better established than that education pays, even when considered solely as a pecuniary investment. Abundant school houses lessen the necesity for jails, workhouses and almshouses.

President Roosevelt is right. The reasons for granting commercial reciprocity to Cuba far outweigh the reasons for making similar concessions to any other government. In looking after Cuba's welfare, this nation has accepted a solemn trust. That country apparently needs our aid as much as ever. The president says no American industry will be injured by extending such aid and makes a strong plea that it shall no longer be withheld.

Cubia's first minister to the United States will soon reach his post in Washington. He is by no means a stranger, having been educated in an American college, and having been prominent here as the agent of Cuban patriots during the Spanish-American war. He is as much American as he is Cuban in spirit and sentiment, and an excellent and capabel man who will doubtless serve his government well.

There are now 200,000 children attending school in Cuba, and schools are being multiplied. The majority of them had no schooling whatever until the United States planted its school system on the island. Of all the blessings this government has conferred on Cuba, free schools will undoubtedly prove the greatest.

Congressman Hepburn, who was born in Ohio, has been nominated for congress in the Eighth Iowa district for the ninth consecutive time. Those who would succeed in political life ought to be careful about the selection of a birthplace.

It is estimated that the American people paid $20,000,000 for theatrical entertainment last season. How many got the worth of their money?

The Chicago man who has been married four times and is supporting three mothers-in-law is the champion philanthropist up to date.

The promise of a record-breaking cotton crop in the south is going to be another big factor in promoting general prosperity.

The Panama hat craze is likely to result in many a husband having nothing to say when he sees his wife's millinery bill.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Joseph Darrah.

Mrs. Sarah J. Darragh, nee Francy, 47 years old, a native of New Cumberland, and a resident of Toronto, where her husband is superintendent of the Great Western Sewer Pipe works, died yesterday at the Friends' Sanitarium at Flushing, where she had undergone a surgical operation. She is survived by her husband and two sons.

ARRESTED AT ALLIANCE

In an Alliance paper yesterday appeared the following: "William Nice was arrested last night by Officer Votaw of the railroad police. He was riding on a freight train, west bound for Chicago. He was a veritable arsenal, and had on his person two revolvers, every chamber of which was loaded, a razor and knife. Two complaints were filed against him, trespassing and carrying concealed weapons.

"At a hearing this morning he stated he was a shoemaker from East Liverpool and had started for Chicago, got as far as Massillon when his money ran low, and he took a freight train for Alliance. His story was not a very plausible one and he could give no reason for having the revolvers on his person. Mayor Walker gave him $10 and costs for trespassing and $25 and costs and 10 days in the workhouse for carrying concealed weapons.

WHAT IS GOING ON IN THE POTTERIES

While the fact may seem rather peculiar it is nevertheless true that an order for no less than four carloads of ware was placed in this city yesterday for shipment to Trenton, the center of the pottery district of the east. One firm received two cars of this order, while the other two cars were divided among as many firms. The ware in this order is all decorated and is for delivery just as soon as it can be made. Such conditions do not prevail in the sister pottery city in the east, and it has been years since an order has been placed with a Trenton pottery firm for shipment to this city.

Considerable has been heared within the past few weeks relative to the "shut down," but yesterday few if any of the manufacturers could tell when their plants would close. It was stated by a representative of the C. C. Thompson Pottery company that that plant would shut down on the evening of July 3, but how long it would remain so could not be told. This shut down will be governed entirely by conditions that prevail at that time. If business warrants a closing of the shops they will be closed, but if the ware is needed by the jobbers it will have to be made.

While drilling for oil on the McGaffick farm in Hancock county forty feet of clay was discovered yesterday. The clay has been found to be an excellent quality, and some will be brought to this city where it will be given a thorough test. A 40 foot vein of clay is quiet a large one, and if it is found to be of use, it can be easily marketed in this district. It is also said that just above the clay a vein of coal from four to 16 feet was touched. It seems that the wealth of Hancock county remains to be told as discoveries are being made there frequently.

The American Cereal Company is about to place an order with a local firm for 4,000 pieces for "something new." It is just a new scheme with that firm, but not with the manufacturer to whom the order will be given. The scheme is nothing more or less than a cup and saucer with the name of the special article with which it is to be given away painted on the cup and around the edge of the saucer. The present order will be greatly increased during the fall and all of it will be made by a local firm which has secured the contract.

The price-list committee of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, now in session in the Ribsam building at Trenton, devoted Thursday morning's session to the examination of statistical reports of the trade. The work of coupling the price lists was reached yesterday. The conference with the sanitary manufacturers is slated for Monday.

Commencing next week, Warehousemen's local No. 48 will meet in the Knights of Columbus hall on Friday evenings, instead of in the Oyster block on Sixth street, as has been the custom in the past. The third floor of the Sixth street building is to be remodeled, and on this account the local had to secure other quarters.

M. Chalfant, of Philadelphia, who is visiting friends in this city, visited of one of the hill potteries yesterday afternoon. It has been 40 years since Mr. Chalfant visited a pottery to see the "inside workings," and he stated that the changes that have been made in the industry within that time were wonderful.

Harry E. Bicknell, of Trenton, who has been in this city for several days on business, returned to his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bicknell was formerly connected with an assortment company of this city, and has been out of the city but a few months.

The New Castle Pottery company is having several new shapes made in this city which it expects to have ready for the market in the next two months. A dinner and toilet shape are being made for this firm, and both are exceedingly catchy designs.

George Wolf, for several years connected with the Peoria potteries, has resigned his position there and is now associated with the Shenango pottery at New Castle. Mr. Wolf has always made a success of the pottery trade where others have failed.

A. T. Otis, representing Pitts, Kimball & Co., of Boston, who has been in the city several days placing some very large orders, has returned to his home. Some very substantial business was placed by Mr. Otis.

Will S. George, of the East Palestine Pottery company, who was in the city last evening, stated that business with his company was rather good and practically all departments were being run full.

Kilndrawers' local No. 17 will meet in Brotherhood hall this evening when officers for the new term will be elected. Some other important business will also be considered at this session.

During the absence of Henry Noficer, of Chester, bench boss at the East Liverpool pottery, his duties will be looked after by George Smith, who is now located at the Brunt plant.

Rapid progress is being made on the construction of the Myers sewer pipe plant at the North End, Toronto. The frame work for this massive building is about one half completed.

Frank Fowler, foreman of the decorating department at the Oliver plant, Sebring, and Miss Viola Evans, daughter of John Evans, of Beloit, were married Thursday.

The expected pottery game at Sebring last Wednesday between the two teams composed of pottery employes of that town did not take place on account of rain.

Mr. Hughes, a well known decalcomania salesman, who has been absent from the city for several days, has returned.

It is said the new local that is to be formed at Zanesville will be given the number of local union 39.

Cubia's first minister to the United States will soon reach his post in Washington. He is by no means a stranger, having been educated in an American college, and having been prominent here as the agent of Cuban patriots during the Spanish-American war. He is as much American as he is Cuban in spirit and sentiment, and an excellent and capabel man who will doubtless serve his government well.

There are now 200,000 children attending school in Cuba, and schools are being muitiplied. The majority of them had no schooling whatever until the United States planted its school system on the island. Of all the blessings this government has conferred on Cuba, free schools will undoubtedly prove the greatest.

She is survived by her husband and two sons.

ARRESTED AT ALLIANCE

In an Alliance paper yesterday appeared the following: "William Nice was arrested last night by Officer Votaw of the railroad police. He was riding on a freight train, west bound for Chicago. He was a veritable arsenal, and had on his person two revolvers, every chamber of which was loaded, a razor and knife. Two complaints were filed against him, trespassing and carrying concealed weapons.

"At a hearing this morning he stated he was a shoemaker from East Liverpool and had started for Chicago, got as far as Massillon when his money ran low, and he took a freight train for Alliance. His story was not a very plausible one and he could give no reason for having the revolvers on his person. Mayor Walker gave him $10 and costs for trespassing and $25 and costs and 10 days in the workhouse for carrying concealed weapons.

While the fact may seem rather peculiar it is nevertheless true that an order for no less than four carloads of ware was placed in this city yesterday for shipment to Trenton, the center of the pottery district of the east. One firm received two cars of this order, while the other two cars were divided among as many firms. The ware in this order is all decorated and is for delivery just as soon as it can be made. Such conditions do not prevail in the sister pottery city in the east, and it has been years since an order has been placed with a Trenton pottery firm for shipment to this city.

Considerable has been heared within the past few weeks relative to the "shut down," but yesterday few if any of the manufacturers could tell when their plants would close. It was stated by a representative of the C. C. Thompson Pottery company that that plant would shut down on the evening of July 3, but how long it would remain so could not be told. This shut down will be governed entirely by conditions that prevail at that time. If business warrants a closing of the shops they will be closed, but if the ware is needed by the jobbers it will have to be made.

While drilling for oil on the McGaffick farm in Hancock county forty feet of clay was discovered yesterday. The clay has been found to be an excellent quality, and some will be brought to this city where it will be given a thorough test. A 40 foot vein of clay is quiet a large one, and if it is found to be of use, it can be easily marketed in this district. It is also said that just above the clay a vein of coal from four to 16 feet was touched. It seems that the wealth of Hancock county remains to be told as discoveries are being made there frequently.

The American Cereal Company is about to place an order with a local firm for 4,000 pieces for "something new." It is just a new scheme with that firm, but not with the manufacturer to whom the order will be given. The scheme is nothing more or less than a cup and saucer with the name of the special article with which it is to be given away painted on the cup and around the edge of the saucer. The present order will be greatly increased during the fall and all of it will be made by a local firm which has secured the contract.

The price-list committee of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, now in session in the Ribsam building at Trenton, devoted Thursday morning's session to the examination of statistical reports of the trade. The work of coupling the price lists was reached yesterday. The conference with the sanitary manufacturers is slated for Monday.

Commencing next week, Warehousemen's local No. 48 will meet in the Knights of Columbus hall on Friday evenings, instead of in the Oyster block on Sixth street, as has been the custom in the past. The third floor of the Sixth street building is to be remodeled, and on this account the local had to secure other quarters.

M. Chalfant, of Philadelphia, who is visiting friends in this city, visited of one of the hill potteries yesterday afternoon. It has been 40 years since Mr. Chalfant visited a pottery to see the "inside workings," and he stated that the changes that have been made in the industry within that time were wonderful.

Harry E. Bicknell, of Trenton, who has been in this city for several days on business, returned to his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bicknell was formerly connected with an assortment company of this city, and has been out of the city but a few months.

The New Castle Pottery company is having several new shapes made in this city which it expects to have ready for the market in the next two months. A dinner and toilet shape are being made for this firm, and both are exceedingly catchy designs.

George Wolf, for several years connected with the Peoria potteries, has resigned his position there and is now associated with the Shenango pottery at New Castle. Mr. Wolf has always made a success of the pottery trade where others have failed.

A. T. Otis, representing Pitts, Kimball & Co., of Boston, who has been in the city several days placing some very large orders, has returned to his home. Some very substantial business was placed by Mr. Otis.

Will S. George, of the East Palestine Pottery company, who was in the city last evening, stated that business with his company was rather good and practically all departments were being run full.

Kilndrawers' local No. 17 will meet in Brotherhood hall this evening when officers for the new term will be elected. Some other important business will also be considered at this session.

During the absence of Henry Nofficer, of Chester, bench boss at the East Liverpool pottery, his duties will be looked after by George Smith, who is now located at the Brunt plant.

Frank Fowler, foreman of the decorating department at the Oliver plant, Sebring, and Miss Viola Evans, daughter of John Evans, of Beloit, were married Thursday.

The expected pottery game at Sebring last Wednesday between the two teams composed of pottery employes of that town did not take place on account of rain.

Mr. Hughes, a well known decalcomania salesman, who has been absent from the city for several days, has returned.

It is said the new local that is to be formed at Zanesville will be given the number of local union 39.

SOUTH SIDE

TO PAVE 14 FEET

The East Liverpool & Rock Springs street railway has now offered to furnish the material and do the work of paving a width of 14 feet of the streets along the line of route of the street railway line from the Ohio river bridge. With this big assistance and taking into consideration the fact that the property owners along each side of the streets will pay their regular one-third, the expense to the town for paving the streets will be small.

A number of the citizens have expressed themselves already in favor of it and the majority of the town's population hopes that the ordinance will be passed by council at their next meeting on next Thursday evening.

New Track Is Ready.

The East Liverpool and Rock Springs street railway will have its new double track ready this evening between the Ohio river bridge and the park for Sunday traffic. This statement was made this morning by an employe of the road. The track has already been laid the entire distance and all that remains to be done is the connection with the main track.

Damage Not Large.

The boiling over of some grease at the Chester mill yesterday afternoon was the cause of a portion of the grease house burning. When the water was turned on the flames it was with such force that a portion of the building was knocked over. The damage is very small.

CHESTER NOTES.

The 18-year-old son of John Gill, of the mill addition, who was reported seriously ill earlier in the week, is slowly recovering.

HARDEST WORK AHEAD

Equalization Board Still Has a Big Task to Accomplish.

Although the members of the board of equalization have been at work for several weeks, their work is by no means near an end. In fact some of the hardest of their duties are yet to come, and so far the members claim they have received no assistance from County Auditor Adams. He is to be asked to come to the city, said a member of the board this morning, but whether the invitation will be accepted cannot be told. The board has completed the work of going over the personal property of five wards and three wards of structures have been looked after. There are yet two wards of this sort of work to be done, and that will be followed by the board surveying the factories. This will no doubt prove one of the most tedious tasks, as the board, it is intimated, will try to keep the figures down as much as possible.

A member of the board said: "I cannot see why the county auditor does not come to East Liverpool as other auditors have done. Why, I remember when former auditors brought their families to the city to spend a few days. Adams should come to this city now, if never again, as his presence is needed."

JOYOUS REUNION

BETWEEN EX-CONFEDERATE OFFICER AND EX-SLAVE.

Colonel R. H. P. Staub, of Martinsburg, W. Va., is in the city on a mission differing somewhat from that of the usual run of visitors. He came last evening, and with but one object in view, that he might have the pleasure of meeting a friend of his boyhoood days, whom he had not seen for forty years.

This friend is Mrs. Sallie Sheets, janitress of the Carnegie public library. Mrs. Millie Kilmore, mother of Mrs. Sheets, was a slave and belonged to Colonel Staub's mother. It was under these circumstances that the colonel and Mrs. Sheets met when children. They played togther and were great friends.

In 1862 Mr. Staub, then 29 years of age, enlisted in the rebel army as a colonel under General Jackson. When the war was over he returned home, but things were then much changed. The slaves had all deserted the southern homestead and Sallie with them. From the day he enlisted until last evening Colonel Staub had not seen Mrs. Sheets. Their meeting at the library was a most touching one. Reminiscences of their happy days were recalled and the scene presented was a grand one.

While in the city Colonel Staub will be the guest of Dr. George P. Ikirt and family.

THEFT IS CHARGED

The police are on the lookout for Roy Adams, a young man well known in this city, who, it is alleged, made a daring theft in Chester yesterday morning. He is in the employ of Mrs. Madden, proprietress of a restaurant located opposite Rock Springs park, and she states that while she was out on an errand Adams tapped the till for a sum of money ranging from $15 to $25.

Word reached the police last evening that Adams is in hiding in the city and they are keeping a close watch for him.

The young man had boarded at the restaurant ever since he first came to Chester several weeks ago. At that time he held a good position in the Chester tin mill which he later lost for some unknown reason. Since that time, having told of his mother being dead and not knowing where his father was, one of the sons through sympathy, allowed him to remain and board with them by his helping around the restaurant until he might find another job.

When there was no one in the front part of the restaurant but himself yesterday, it is claimed, he took the opportunity offered to tap the till. The theft was not noticed nor was Adams missed for nearly a half hour, after which Mr. Madden and other boarders started in search of him, but learned that he had crossed the bridge. They came over to East Liverpool, but could find nothing of the young miscreant who had made good his escape. He has not been heard of since.

who have purchased the Fisher farms and other lands even farther out, and have laid out the same in lots, and are speculating on increases in value of the same. It is not a question of cutting in two the values of the people who have already built homes, as naively suggested by the attorney at the meeting of council the other night, but rather of doubling and trebling the value of the holdings of the interested gentlemen who are making these demands. The people will not be, and council should not be, misled by such sophistries.

"We do not think the citizens generally desire or demand the building of this line, and if the company is required to build it by the command of the city council, the city will be morally, if not indeed legally, responsible for any accidents that may result. In the opinion of some very good lawyers whom I have consulted, a legal responsibility will rest upon the city if damages are incurred.

"It has been said that the company does not use proper safety appliances. Such a statement is untrue and most unreasonable. The very best modern wheel brakes, track brakes and motors are used on the Calcutta road, but cars occasionally run away there in spite of all these precautions. One reason is that we are obliged by the ordinances under which we operate to use a girder or flat rail on all paved streets; this rail is level with or below the surface of the street and collects all the dirt, slime and ice of the highway.

"Then again we are obliged by the ordinance to lay the rails so as to conform exactly to the surface of the street, and must, of course, follow the angles of the street. The dangers imposed by this requirement are illustrated at the scene of the Calcutta road accident. If a T rail, such as is used on steam and suburban roads, could have been used there, and if the city ordinance would have permitted the company to raise the outer rail above the street level at that point, these accidents might have been prevented. But for obvious reasons the city could not permit this to be done.

"Similar conditions confront the company on the Lisbon road and on the several streets in Pleasant Heights, save only that there is no convenient Wucherer house at the turn of the hill above the West End school house in which to lodge runaway cars. If a car ever gets away and is derailed at that point, no one can calculate the loss of life. We think council should consider these things, as well as the carefully prepared arguments of attorneys whose clients, interested in selling their land holdings, 'are willing to take the risk.'

"The amended ordinance granting the franchises to the East Liverpool Railway company and extending its franchise, contains many concessions to the citizens of East Liverpoool, which are of intrinsic value and which they prize more highly than they do the building of this dangerous spur. If council annuls the present ordinance the company, of course, must fall back on the original ordinance with its limitations, both as to the city and itself.

"Before attempting anything of this kind, involving, as it does, so much of importance to all concerned, we trust the council will consider all the things the city and its inhabitants might lose by the annuling of the later franchise, as well as the uncertain benefits that the gentlemen who are insisting upon the building of this road might have to gain. We trust the council will appoint a committee to take up this matter and meet with the representatives from Pleasant Heights and the representatives of the railway company, for the purpose of developing the situation fully and arriving, if possible, at some conclusion mutually satisfactory.

"If the gentlemen are sincere about wanting to build this line, I repeat, the company will place nothing in their way, but will aid them in every way possible."

TRAMPS' GATEPOST SIGNS

Explanations Which Will Help You to Understand Them.

The rude drawings hardly need a key. When on some white gatepost I found the sketch of a gun, I stole farther down the road. I had a strong objection so early in my career to being riddled full of holes by some intrepid farmer. The outline of a dog of warlike proportions, with wild eyes and ferocious teeth, was wont to make me go breakfastless. My summer wardrobe was not in condition to allow of further mutilation. If I felt brave enough to kick a yelping cur, I sauntered in recklessly at the gate which bore a portrait of a toy dog. Once past him one could usually get a bite.

A big round "O" did not make one wild to approach the premises it adorned. It generally portrayed a hostess with a nature of adamant. A single "X" stood for a cross saw, which with small manipulation might earn a meal. Two X's made a tramp of none too vigorous a makeup go farther down the road. It suggested considerable wood cutting in exchange for a meal.

The sign every tramp looks for anxiously is a crudely drawn table, with a lopsided coffee cup and a plate upon it. Beyond that gatepost dwells a sweet, simple, motherly soul who will welcome the most dilapidated hobo into her spotless kitchen and set before him a good square meal. She may sit beside him, inquiring as to the safety of his soul, and she may give him a mother's gentle advice or she may have a story to tell tearfully of a wayward boy lost somewhere in the great world, and all the fee she asks for her gracious hospitality is a simple request that in the wanderings of her guest he may look about for her absent boy and give him a loving message of a mother's longing and watching.—Good Housekeeping.

SOUTH SIDE

TO PAVE 14 FEET

The East Liverpool & Rock Springs street railway has now offered to furnish the material and do the work of paving a width of 14 feet of the streets along the line of route of the street railway line from the Ohio river bridge. With this big assistance and taking into consideration the fact that the property owners along each side of the streets will pay their regular one-third, the expense to the town for paving the streets will be small.

A number of the citizens have expressed themselves already in favor of it and the majority of the town's population hopes that the ordinance will be passed by council at their next meeting on next Thursday evening.

New Track Is Ready.

The East Liverpool and Rock Springs street railway will have its new double track ready this evening between the Ohio river bridge and the park for Sunday traffic. This statement was made this morning by an employe of the road. The track has already been laid the entire distance and all that remains to be done is the connection with the main track.

Damage Not Large.

The boiling over of some grease at the Chester mill yesterday afternoon was the cause of a portion of the grease house burning. When the water was turned on the flames it was with such force that a portion of the building was knocked over. The damage is very small.

CHESTER NOTES.

Rev. D. A. Green, of Fairview, will preach tomorrow for the Presbyterians in the M. E. church.

The bakers, of East Liverpool, are enjoying their annual outing today at Rock Springs park.

HARDEST WORK AHEAD

Equalization Board Still Has a Big Task to Accomplish.

Although the members of the board of equalization have been at work for several weeks, their work is by no means near an end. In fact some of the hardest of their duties are yet to come, and so far the members claim they have received no assistance from County Auditor Adams. He is to be asked to come to the city, said a member of the board this morning, but whether the invitation will be accepted cannot be told. The board has completed the work of going over the personal property of five wards and three wards of structures have been looked after. There are yet two wards of this sort of work to be done, and that will be followed by the board surveying the factories. This will no doubt prove one of the most tedious tasks, as the board, it is intimated, will try to keep the figures down as much as possible.

A member of the board said: "I cannot see why the county auditor does not come to East Liverpool as other auditors have done. Why, I remember when former auditors brought their families to the city to spend a few days. Adams should come to this city now, if never again, as his presence is needed."

BETWEEN EX-CONFEDERATE OFFICER AND EX-SLAVE.

Colonel R. H. P. Staub, of Martinsburg, W. Va., is in the city on a mission differing somewhat from that of the usual run of visitors. He came last evening, and with but one object in view, that he might have the pleasure of meeting a friend of his boyhoood days, whom he had not seen for forty years.

This friend is Mrs. Sallie Sheets, janitress of the Carnegie public library. Mrs. Millie Kilmore, mother of Mrs. Sheets, was a slave and belonged to Colonel Staub's mother. It was under these circumstances that the colonel and Mrs. Sheets met when children. They played togther and were great friends.

In 1862 Mr. Staub, then 29 years of age, enlisted in the rebel army as a colonel under General Jackson. When the war was over he returned home, but things were then much changed. The slaves had all deserted the southern homestead and Sallie with them. From the day he enlisted until last evening Colonel Staub had not seen Mrs. Sheets. Their meeting at the library was a most touching one. Reminiscences of their happy days were recalled and the scene presented was a grand one.

While in the city Colonel Staub will be the guest of Dr. George P. Ikirt and family.

The police are on the lookout for Roy Adams, a young man well known in this city, who, it is alleged, made a daring theft in Chester yesterday morning. He is in the employ of Mrs. Madden, proprietress of a restaurant located opposite Rock Springs park, and she states that while she was out on an errand Adams tapped the till for a sum of money ranging from $15 to $25.

Word reached the police last evening that Adams is in hiding in the city and they are keeping a close watch for him.

The young man had boarded at the restaurant ever since he first came to Chester several weeks ago. At that time he held a good position in the Chester tin mill which he later lost for some unknown reason. Since that time, having told of his mother being dead and not knowing where his father was, one of the sons through sympathy, allowed him to remain and board with them by his helping around the restaurant until he might find another job.

When there was no one in the front part of the restaurant but himself yesterday, it is claimed, he took the opportunity offered to tap the till. The theft was not noticed nor was Adams missed for nearly a half hour, after which Mr. Madden and other boarders started in search of him, but learned that he had crossed the bridge. They came over to East Liverpool, but could find nothing of the young miscreant who had made good his escape. He has not been heard of since.

who have purchased the Fisher farms and other lands even farther out, and have laid out the same in lots, and are speculating on increases in value of the same. It is not a question of cutting in two the values of the people who have already built homes, as naively suggested by the attorney at the meeting of council the other night, but rather of doubling and trebling the value of the holdings of the interested gentlemen who are making these demands. The people will not be, and council should not be, misled by such sophistries.

"We do not think the citizens generally desire or demand the building of this line, and if the company is required to build it by the command of the city council, the city will be morally, if not indeed legally, responsible for any accidents that may result. In the opinion of some very good lawyers whom I have consulted, a legal responsibility will rest upon the city if damages are incurred.

"It has been said that the company does not use proper safety appliances. Such a statement is untrue and most unreasonable. The very best modern wheel brakes, track brakes and motors are used on the Calcutta road, but cars occasionally run away there in spite of all these precautions. One reason is that we are obliged by the ordinances under which we operate to use a girder or flat rail on all paved streets; this rail is level with or below the surface of the street and collects all the dirt, slime and ice of the highway.

"Then again we are obliged by the ordinance to lay the rails so as to conform exactly to the surface of the street, and must, of course, follow the angles of the street. The dangers imposed by this requirement are illustrated at the scene of the Calcutta road accident. If a T rail, such as is used on steam and suburban roads, could have been used there, and if the city ordinance would have permitted the company to raise the outer rail above the street level at that point, these accidents might have been prevented. But for obvious reasons the city could not permit this to be done.

"Similar conditions confront the company on the Lisbon road and on the several streets in Pleasant Heights, save only that there is no convenient Wucherer house at the turn of the hill above the West End school house in, which to lodge runaway cars. If a car ever gets away and is derailed at that point, no one can calculate the loss of life. We think council should consider these things, as well as the carefully prepared arguments of attorneys whose clients, interested in selling their land holdings, 'are willing to take the risk.'

"The amended ordinance granting the franchises to the East Liverpool Railway company and extending its franchise, contains many concessions to the citizens of East Liverpoool, which are of intrinsic value and which they prize more highly than they do the building of this dangerous spur. If council annuls the present ordinance the company, of course, must fall back on the original ordinance with its limitations, both as to the city and itself.

"Before attempting anything of this kind, involving, as it does, so much of importance to all concerned, we trust the council will consider all the things the city and its inhabitants might lose by the annuling of the later franchise, as well as the uncertain benefits that the gentlemen who are insisting upon the building of this road might have to gain. We trust the council will appoint a committee to take up this matter and meet with the representatives from Pleasant Heights and the representatives of the railway company, for the purpose of developing the situation fully and arriving, if possible, at some conclusion mutually satisfactory.

"If the gentlemen are sincere about wanting to build this line, I repeat, the company will place nothing in their way, but will aid them in every way possible."

Explanations Which Will Help You to Understand Them.

The rude drawings hardly need a key. When on some white gatepost I found the sketch of a gun, I stole farther down the road. I had a strong objection so early in my career to being riddled full of holes by some intrepid farmer. The outline of a dog of warlike proportions, with wild eyes and ferocious teeth, was wont to make me go breakfastless. My summer wardrobe was not in condition to allow of further mutilation. If I felt brave enough to kick a yelping cur, I sauntered in recklessly at the gate which bore a portrait of a toy dog. Once past him one could usually get a bite.

A big round "O" did not make one wild to approach the premises it adorned. It generally portrayed a hostess with a nature of adamant. A single "X" stood for a cross saw, which with small manipulation might earn a meal. Two X's made a tramp of none too vigorous a makeup go farther down the road. It suggested considerable wood cutting in exchange for a meal.

The sign every tramp looks for anxiously is a crudely drawn table, with a lopsided coffee cup and a plate upon it. Beyond that gatepost dwells a sweet, simple, motherly soul who will welcome the most dilapidated hobo into her spotless kitchen and set before him a good square meal. She may sit beside him, inquiring as to the safety of his soul, and she may give him a mother's gentle advice or she may have a story to tell tearfully of a wayward boy lost somewhere in the great world, and all the fee she asks for her gracious hospitality is a simple request that in the wanderings of her guest he may look about for her absent boy and give him a loving message of a mother's longing and watching. — Good Housekeeping.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

Judging from the following lineup they will not, however, be long in making a world wide reputation: Aufderheide, c; Mahoney, p; Morris, 1b; McDermott, 2b; Dawson, 3b; Dunn, ss; Fisher, lf; Saulsberry, m; Thompson, rf.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

DEPUTIES NOT TOLD

ACTED OF THEIR OWN ACCORD

Charleston, W. Va. June 14.—Captain J. K. Thompson, United States marshal disclaims any responsibility for the presence of his deputies at Collins Colliery company's mine at Glen Jean, and says if they are there it is as private citizens and upon their own responsibility. He has written them they do not represent his department. The operators, it is said, asked Thompson to enforce the injunction issued in 1897, but he declined. It applies to five or six collieries and is directed to Fred Dilcher, Eugene Debs, Chris Evans and several others and their "associates, confederates, agents and promoters." Evans is the only one mentioned that is here now. He is making no effort to violate the order. It is the general opinion here that the injunction issued in 1897 is not operative in this instance.

The Mile Branch company has made concessions, reducting the price of powder, allowing a nine-hour day and pay every two weeks. The men voted yesterday to return to work. The granting of concessions by the Hocking Valley and Mile Branch operators, it is believed, will put a new phase on the strike in that section. It is the first break of the operators to get their men to return to work, and other operators will probably follow their example.

Strikers Were Steadily Losing Ground

Bluefield, W. Va., June 14.—In the Flat Top region the striking miners were steadily losing ground yesterday and the operators predicted that within a week the strike will be a thing of the past. A large percentage of the men returned to work yesterday and the loading throughout the field was almost double that of Thursday. In the Tug River district it was different. But little coal was delivered there yesterday. The output of this district is small, compared with the Elkhorn or Flat Top regions proper. The march of the strikers through the field yesterday amounted to comparatively nothing. There was only a small number of men in line, possibly not over a hundred in all, and their walk was ineffectual. No disturbances have been recorded so disturbances had been recorded so far last night.

CUT OFF FOOD OF HELPLESS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The work of the strikers in attempting to bring out all men who are still in the employ of the coal companies went steadily on. Their campaigns against the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was nearly over last night, most of these men being out, and the union was paying more attention to the fire bosses, clerks and others who had taken the places of those who quit. Pressure was being brought to bear on them in every possible way. Quite a number of the fire bosses throughout the region have already stopped work because they had been asked to take the strikers' places, and at a meeting held here yesterday afternoon about a dozen more consented to join the strikers.

The officials of the coal companies in this region are complaining of what they call "secret intimidation" of the families of workmen who have remained loyal to the employers, threatening to boycott merchants who sell to the families of men who are working, most of the men being kept at the collieries, while their families are at home. One official said in part:

Appeals From Unprotected Families.

"Every day we get appeals from these families and in every instance the company takes it upon itself to see that they shall not hereafter be cut off from their daily supply of the necessities of life."

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

Irrigation Bill Through Congress.

Washington, June 14.—The house yesterday passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee, was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill already has passed the senate.

LARKINS, THE DRUG MAN

FOOLED HIS SUPERIOR.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met upon the street a lieutenant who had bearded the pasha and disregarded his orders. "To what regiment do you belong?" demanded the indignant minister. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The young man obeyed, and the twain rode along gloomily enough for some time, when the pasha stopped his carriage and entered an office where he would be detained for some time on business. Seizing the opportunity, the culprit sprang from the vehicle, darted into a neighboring barber's stall and regained his post before the return of his jailer minus his beard. For the remainder of the route the officer buried his face in his hands and seemed the picture of apprehension.

Abasseuh was reached at last, and all the officers were assembled to witness the degradation of their comrade, who all the while kept well in the rear of his chief. "Come forward, you son of a dog!" cried the irate pasha, when there stepped before him an officer with a face as clean as a baby's and a look of the most supreme innocence. His excellency gave one look of blank astonishment and then, with an appreciative smile breaking over his war worn features, turned to the assembled officers and said, "Here, gentlemen, your old minister is a fool, and your young lieutenant is a captain."

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live In the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as gigantic.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitants.—International Monthly.

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

ACTED OF THEIR OWN ACCORD

Charleston, W. Va. June 14.—Captain J. K. Thompson, United States marshal disclaims any responsibility for the presence of his deputies at Collins Colliery company's mine at Glen Jean, and says if they are there it is as private citizens and upon their own responsibility. He has written them they do not represent his department. The operators, it is said, asked Thompson to enforce the injunction issued in 1897, but he declined. It applies to five or six collieries and is directed to Fred Dilcher, Eugene Debs, Chris Evans and several others and their "associates, confederates, agents and promoters." Evans is the only one mentioned that is here now. He is making no effort to violate the order. It is the general opinion here that the injunction issued in 1897 is not operative in this instance.

The Mile Branch company has made concessions, reducting the price of powder, allowing a nine-hour day and pay every two weeks. The men voted yesterday to return to work. The granting of concessions by the Hocking Valley and Mile Branch operators, it is believed, will put a new phase on the strike in that section. It is the first break of the operators to get their men to return to work, and other operators will probably follow their example.

Strikers Were Steadily Losing Ground

Bluefield, W. Va., June 14.—In the Flat Top region the striking miners were steadily losing ground yesterday and the operators predicted that within a week the strike will be a thing of the past. A large percentage of the men returned to work yesterday and the loading throughout the field was almost double that of Thursday. In the Tug River district it was different. But little coal was delivered there yesterday. The output of this district is small, compared with the Elkhorn or Flat Top regions proper. The march of the strikers through the field yesterday amounted to comparatively nothing. There was only a small number of men in line, possibly not over a hundred in all, and their walk was ineffectual. No disturbances have been recorded so far last night.

CUT OFF FOOD OF HELPLESS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The work of the strikers in attempting to bring out all men who are still in the employ of the coal companies went steadily on. Their campaigns against the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was nearly over last night, most of these men being out, and the union was paying more attention to the fire bosses, clerks and others who had taken the places of those who quit. Pressure was being brought to bear on them in every possible way. Quite a number of the fire bosses throughout the region have already stopped work because they had been asked to take the strikers' places, and at a meeting held here yesterday afternoon about a dozen more consented to join the strikers.

The officials of the coal companies in this region are complaining of what they call "secret intimidation" of the families of workmen who have remained loyal to the employers, threatening to boycott merchants who sell to the families of men who are working, most of the men being kept at the collieries, while their families are at home. One official said in part:

Appeals From Unprotected Families.

"Every day we get appeals from these families and in every instance the company takes it upon itself to see that they shall not hereafter be cut off from their daily supply of the necessities of life."

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

Irrigation Bill Through Congress.

Washington, June 14.—The house yesterday passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee, was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill already has passed the senate.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The Toiler and His Home

HOME SURROUNDINGS OF OUR TOILERS SHOULD NOT BE SO DEGRADED AS TO DEGRADE CITIZENSHIP. YOU CAN'T MAKE A MAN LIVE LIKE A PIG AND EXPECT HIM TO VOTE LIKE A MAN. IT ISN'T IN HIM. A MAN IS NEVER ABOVE HIS ENVIRONMENT. YOU CAN'T ROB A CHILD OF ITS CHILDHOOD PLAY AND EXPECT TO APPEAL TO THE MANHOOD OF THAT CHILD LATER ON.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

Scotch Thrift.

The ferryboat was well on her way when a violent storm arose, and fears were entertained for her safety.

The ferryman and his mate, both Scotchmen, held a consultation, and after a short debate the ferryman turned to his passengers and remarked anxiously:

"We'll just tak' yer tuppences noo, for we no ken what might come ower us."—London Answers.

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent. Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her: "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

"Where should a poor girl get a rich and handsome young lover? Yonder adder is my husband."

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

A Fair Exchange.

Clerical Customer (arousing himself from nap in barber's chair)—Finished, eh?

Barber—Yes, sir; quite some time ago.

Clerical Customer—Indeed! Then I must have been indulging in a quiet nap.

Barber—You surely have, sir.

Clerical Customer—It was certainly very kind of you not to awaken me. The rest has done me good, and I am very thankful to you for what was really a very refreshing sleep.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended your church last Sunday.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge. It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

The Toiler and His Home

HOME SURROUNDINGS OF OUR TOILERS SHOULD NOT BE SO DEGRADED AS TO DEGRADE CITIZENSHIP. YOU CAN'T MAKE A MAN LIVE LIKE A PIG AND EXPECT HIM TO VOTE LIKE A MAN. IT ISN'T IN HIM. A MAN IS NEVER ABOVE HIS ENVIRONMENT. YOU CAN'T ROB A CHILD OF ITS CHILDHOOD PLAY AND EXPECT TO APPEAL TO THE MANHOOD OF THAT CHILD LATER ON.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

Scotch Thrift.

The ferryboat was well on her way when a violent storm arose, and fears were entertained for her safety.

The ferryman and his mate, both Scotchmen, held a consultation, and after a short debate the ferryman turned to his passengers and remarked anxiously:

"We'll just tak' yer tuppences noo, for we no ken what might come ower us."—London Answers.

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent, Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her. "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended your church last Sunday.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge. It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

Judging from the following lineup they will not, however, be long in making a world wide reputation: Aufderheide, c; Mahoney, p; Morris, 1b; McDermott, 2b; Dawson, 3b; Dunn, ss; Fisher, lf; Saulsberry, m; Thompson, rf.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

NEW RIVER PACKET

Captain O'Neil Expects Soon to Have It Running From This City.

Engineers Meeting Interesting.

The meeting of Calhoun Association No. 41, Stationary Engineers, held Wednesday evening, was one of the most interesting sessions held for some time. The association has formulated a small lecture course, and a lecture by some member or visitor is given upon the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of the month. Mr. Conley, an engineer at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor, who has been elected a delegate from the association to the annual state convention which will meet at Newark June 19-20, will leave for the convention next Wednesday evening.

ACTED OF THEIR OWN ACCORD

Charleston, W. Va., June 14.—Captain J. K. Thompson, United States marshal disclaims any responsibility for the presence of his deputies at Collins Colliery company's mine at Glen Jean, and says if they are there it is as private citizens and upon their own responsibility. He has written them they do not represent his department. The operators, it is said, asked Thompson to enforce the injunction issued in 1897, but he declined. It applies to five or six collieries and is directed to Fred Dilcher, Eugene Debs, Chris Evans and several others and their "associates, confederates, agents and promoters." Evans is the only one mentioned that is here now. He is making no effort to violate the order. It is the general opinion here that the injunction issued in 1897 is not operative in this instance.

The Mile Branch company has made concessions, reducting the price of powder, allowing a nine-hour day and pay every two weeks. The men voted yesterday to return to work. The granting of concessions by the Hocking Valley and Mile Branch operators, it is believed, will put a new phase on the strike in that section. It is the first break of the operators to get their men to return to work, and other operators will probably follow their example.

Strikers Were Steadily Losing Ground

Bluefield, W. Va., June 14.—In the Flat Top region the striking miners were steadily losing ground yesterday and the operators predicted that within a week the strike will be a thing of the past. A large percentage of the men returned to work yesterday and the loading throughout the field was almost double that of Thursday. In the Tug River district it was different. But little coal was delivered there yesterday. The output of this district is small, compared with the Elkhorn or Flat Top regions proper. The march of the strikers through the field yesterday amounted to comparatively nothing. There was only a small number of men in line, possibly not over a hundred in all, and their walk was ineffectual. No disturbances have been recorded so disturbances had been recorded so far last night.

CUT OFF FOOD OF HELPLESS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The work of the strikers in attempting to bring out all men who are still in the employ of the coal companies went steadily on. Their campaigns against the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was nearly over last night, most of these men being out, and the union was paying more attention to the fire bosses, clerks and others who had taken the places of those who quit. Pressure was being brought to bear on them in every possible way. Quite a number of the fire bosses throughout the region have already stopped work because they had been asked to take the strikers' places, and at a meeting held here yesterday afternoon about a dozen more consented to join the strikers.

The officials of the coal companies in this region are complaining of what they call "secret intimidation" of the families of workmen who have remained loyal to the employers, threatening to boycott merchants who sell to the families of men who are working, most of the men being kept at the collieries, while their families are at home. One official said in part:

Appeals From Unprotected Families.

"Every day we get appeals from these families and in every instance the company takes it upon itself to see that they shall not hereafter be cut off from their daily supply of the necessities of life."

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

Irrigation Bill Through Congress.

Washington, June 14.—The house yesterday passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill already has passed the senate.

LARKINS, THE DRUG MAN

FOOLED HIS SUPERIOR.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met upon the street a lieutenant who had bearded the pasha and disregarded his orders. "To what regiment do you belong?" demanded the indignant minister. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The young man obeyed, and the twain rode along gloomily enough for some time, when the pasha stopped his carriage and entered an office where he would be detained for some time on business. Seizing the opportunity, the culprit sprang from the vehicle, darted into a neighboring barber's stall and regained his post before the return of his jailer minus his beard. For the remainder of the route the officer buried his face in his hands and seemed the picture of apprehension.

Abasseuh was reached at last, and all the officers were assembled to witness the degradation of their comrade, who all the while kept well in the rear of his chief. "Come forward, you son of a dog!" cried the irate pasha, when there stepped before him an officer with a face as clean as a baby's and a look of the most supreme innocence. His excellency gave one look of blank astonishment and then, with an appreciative smile breaking over his war worn features, turned to the assembled officers and said, "Here, gentlemen, your old minister is a fool, and your young lieutenant is a captain."

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live In the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as gigantic.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitants.—International Monthly.

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

Judging from the following lineup they will not, however, be long in making a world wide reputation: Aufderheide, c; Mahoney, p; Morris, 1b; McDermott, 2b; Dawson, 3b; Dunn, ss; Fisher, lf; Saulsberry, m; Thompson, rf.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

LARKINS, THE DRUG MAN

FOOLED HIS SUPERIOR.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met upon the street a lieutenant who had bearded the pasha and disregarded his orders. "To what regiment do you belong?" demanded the indignant minister. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The young man obeyed, and the twain rode along gloomily enough for some time, when the pasha stopped his carriage and entered an office where he would be detained for some time on business. Seizing the opportunity, the culprit sprang from the vehicle, darted into a neighboring barber's stall and regained his post before the return of his jailer minus his beard. For the remainder of the route the officer buried his face in his hands and seemed the picture of apprehension.

Abasseuh was reached at last, and all the officers were assembled to witness the degradation of their comrade, who all the while kept well in the rear of his chief. "Come forward, you son of a dog!" cried the irate pasha, when there stopped before him an officer with a face as clean as a baby's and a look of the most supreme innocence. His excellency gave one look of blank astonishment and then, with an appreciative smile breaking over his war worn features, turned to the assembled officers and said, "Here, gentlemen, your old minister is a fool, and your young lieutenant is a captain."

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live In the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as gigantic.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitants.—International Monthly.

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent, Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her: "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

Barber—Yes, sir; quite some time ago.

Clerical Customer—Indeed! Then I must have been indulging in a quiet nap.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended your church last Sunday.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge. It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

Scotch Thrift.

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent, Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her: "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

ARGUMENT HEARD IN RAILWAY CASE

Dispute Over the C. & P. Tax Case Has An Airing in Supreme Court.

NEW HORSESHOERS' LAW

Held to Be Invalid By Attorney General Sheets—East Liverpool Man Wants to Be Head of Examining Board.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, June 14. — Arguments were made in the supreme court by Prosecutor Jason H. Brookes, of Columbiana; County Solicitor P. H. Kiser, of Cleveland, and ex-Prosecutor R. M. Wanamaker, of Summit, on a motion to advance the hearing of the celebrated tax case involving the counties through which the C. & P. road passes and have it tried on its merits. The decision of the court will probably be given on Tuesday, the regular day for the handing down of decisions. Prosecutor Lewis, of Jefferson, has filed a brief with the court asking that the report of Master Commissioner C. C. Connell be set aside. The suit was brought by the auditor of Tuscarawas against auditors of Columbiana, Stark, Mahoning, Portage, Summit, Cuyahoga, Jefferson, Carroll and Belmont for a reapportionment of the valuation of the C. & P. line.

Attorney General Sheets, in an informal opinion, holds that the law enacted by the last general assembly creating a board of examiners for horseshoers is unconstitutional, in that it is not of uniform application. He says it compels those who are qualified to follow the trade to take out a license and exempts the jack-of-all trades who only works at the calling now and then. He is willling to bring a test suit to determine the legality of the board. Governor Nash has not made his appointments under the law. An East Liverpool man aspires to membership on the board. The horseshoers of that city joined in the movement which resulted in the passage of the bill to establish the board.

The suit in mandamus against Governor Nash to compel him to appoint a successor to Lieutenant Governor Nippert and to oust State Senator Frank B. Archer, of Bellaire, from the lieutenant governorship, which he claims to hold by right of succession, was filed yesterday in the supreme court.

The supreme court consented to the filing of the case, and upon the request of counsel on each side promised to hear and decide it before the adjournment of court, the latter part of June.

A Washingson special says that on July 1 the postoffices at East Palestine, Mingo Junction and Minerva will become international money offices.

George F. Irwin, chief of police of Troy, O., in a letter to Chief Thompson, states that on last Tuesday a horse and wagon were stolen from William Snyder of that town and that it is thought that the thief is in this vicinity, as he started in this direction.

SURPRISE EXPRESSED

those seen was Councilman Criss McConnell, who said:

"I am at a loss to know just what the manager is driving at when he says the company 'does not intend to do the work until given a chance to make a defense before council.' A defense of what? Does he desire to defend himself for having asked for the francaise?? I think not, since it is worth $100,000 if it's worth a cent, and it cost him nothing.

"The action taken by council was not hasty. The residents of the Lisbon road have been making preparations for the past two months to take their request before the council. The company was notified Friday morning, June 6, that the council would be asked to take action at its next meeting. At that time the manager was waited upon by a committee of four men representing the taxpayers of our community and their interests. It was the desire of this committee to avoid, as far as possible, doing anything that would be a hardship to the company, and had they been given any encouragement whatever the council would never have been asked to consider the matter. Mr. Healy was asked if he would proceed with the construction of the road, as he had pledged himself to do. He would give no direct answer. The representatives then requested that he relinquish the franchise for the Pleasant Heights extension, in order that others might be given an opportunity to build the line. This was also refused. At this conference Mr. Healy was assured that he would be paid the $5,000 promised, which the corporation's attorney had used as an excuse for the non-compliance with the law, but even this had no effect upon the manager.

"Mr. Healy was then given notice that the question would be taken before the council. When this notice was given the committee did not consider that it was under any obligation to inform the lawyers of the corporation, and it was not done.

"Mr. Healy speaks of a conference with Pleasant Heights citizens as the proper method for settling the matter, and gives it as his opinion that an amicable adjustment of the question could be effected in this manner. Now, I believe I am fairly well posted as to the general feeling of the Pleasant Heights citizens, being one of them, and there is not a man in that section that could be persuaded to serve on a committee of that character. They take the position, and it is a just one too, that for more than two years they have been patiently waiting for some action from the corporation. They have been as completely ignored as though they did not exist, and now the time for overtures is past. They now propose to ascertain through the city council, and through the courts, if need be, whether a regularly enacted law can be disregarded at the will of the East Liverpool street railway corporation."

KILMEN'S OFFICERS

Result of the Election Held By the Local Last Evening.

Kilnmen's local No. 9 held a very interesting session in Brotherhood hall last evening, when officers for the new term were elected. These, however, will not take their seats until the first meeting in July. One new member was obligated, and one member was received by transfer. There were some surprises when the votes were counted in the election, and the office of president is no longer held by Aaron Coleman, although he secured another office.

those seen was Councilman Criss McConnell, who said:

"I am at a loss to know just what the manager is driving at when he says the company 'does not intend to do the work until given a chance to make a defense before council.' A defense of what? Does he desire to defend himself for having asked for the francaise?? I think not, since it is worth $100,000 if it's worth a cent, and it cost him nothing.

"The action taken by council was not hasty. The residents of the Lisbon road have been making preparations for the past two months to take their request before the council. The company was notified Friday morning, June 6, that the council would be asked to take action at its next meeting. At that time the manager was waited upon by a committee of four men representing the taxpayers of our community and their interests. It was the desire of this committee to avoid, as far as possible, doing anything that would be a hardship to the company, and had they been given any encouragement whatever the council would never have been asked to consider the matter. Mr. Healy was asked if he would proceed with the construction of the road, as he had pledged himself to do. He would give no direct answer. The representatives then requested that he relinquish the franchise for the Pleasant Heights extension, in order that others might be given an opportunity to build the line. This was also refused. At this conference Mr. Healy was assured that he would be paid the $5,000 promised, which the corporation's attorney had used as an excuse for the non-compliance with the law, but even this had no effect upon the manager.

"Mr. Healy was then given notice that the question would be taken before the council. When this notice was given the committee did not consider that it was under any obligation to inform the lawyers of the corporation, and it was not done.

"Mr. Healy speaks of a conference with Pleasant Heights citizens as the proper method for settling the matter, and gives it as his opinion that an amicable adjustment of the question could be effected in this manner. Now, I believe I am fairly well posted as to the general feeling of the Pleasant Heights citizens, being one of them, and there is not a man in that section that could be persuaded to serve on a committee of that character. They take the position, and it is a just one too, that for more than two years they have been patiently waiting for some action from the corporation. They have been as completely ignored as though they did not exist, and now the time for overtures is past. They now propose to ascertain through the city council, and through the courts, if need be, whether a regularly enacted law can be disregarded at the will of the East Liverpool street railway corporation."

KILMEN'S OFFICERS

Kilnmen's local No. 9 held a very interesting session in Brotherhood hall last evening, when officers for the new term were elected. These, however, will not take their seats until the first meeting in July. One new member was obligated, and one member was received by transfer. There were some surprises when the votes were counted in the election, and the office of president is no longer held by Aaron Coleman, although he secured another office.

THE LANDLORD'S ACT

Legal Move Is Made Against the United Irish League.

WRIT ISSUED AGAINST LEADERS.

Dublin, June 14.—At the instance of Lord De Freyne a writ has been issued against a large number of members of the Irish parliamentary party on the charge of conspiracy in connection with the tenant troubles on the De Freyne estate, Roscommon county. Among the defendants are John Redmond, John Dillon, W. J. O'Brien, J. G. Swift MacNeill, Conor O'Kelly and the members of the standing committee of the United Irish League, which includes Michael Davitt and a number of the former members of parliament. The Freeman's Journal is also a defendant. Lord De Freyne seeks an injunction and damages.

Altogether 30 writs have been issued in the De Freyne action. The action is really taken by the landlords' association, and it is the beginning of a struggle of the organized landlords against the United Irish League, which is feared to be severe and far-reaching, as the landlords have ample backing.

John Redmond, in an interview in the house of commons last night, frankly admitted that this was the biggest move the landlords, with the support of Dublin Castle, had yet undertaken against the Irish National movement.

Colonel Saunderson, a Conservative member of the house of commons and lord lieutenant of County Calvin, in an interview on the subject, said:

"Yes, an organized attack must be met by organized action, and the Irish landlords have now resolved to take such action. The same course will be followed wherever they have been attacked by the league. I am happy to say that there are sufficient funds behind the landlords to fight any battles which may arise."

William Redmond, James O'Kelly, Patrick O'Brien, John Hayden, Sir Thomas Esmonde, Patrick McHugh and some of the best known priests in Ireland are also among the defendants in the action of Lord De Freyne.

DEPUTIES WERE WITHDRAWN.

Strikers Promised No Violence at Pawtucket.

Pawtucket, R. I., June 14.—Action which the authorities hope means the beginning of the end of the reign of violence incident to the street railway strike was taken yesterday by High Sheriff Hunter C. White removing his deputy sheriffs from the street cars. He did this on representations made to him that the deputies accomplished no good purpose, but incited the crowds to violence.

After the withdrawal of these men the city became quiet. The 1,500 troops ordered out by Governor Kimball Thursday were still on duty yesterday, but if conditions warrant they will be withdrawn gradually, the first instalment to leave today. There was no rioting yesterday. Seven men were arrested for misdemeanors committed on Pawtucket avenue, the route of cars from Providence to this city. The lines of the Pawtucket city system of the United Traction company were not in operation, and the lines in Central Falls, Cumberland and Albion, suburban towns, were tied up. Today it is proposed to reopen the city system under the protection of the police, assisted by the militia.

Rev. Mr. Temple May Accept.

Washington, Pa., June 14.—The Rev. Henry W. Temple, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church of Washington, has been elected to the presidency of Monmouth college, at Monmouth, Ills. It is understood that he will accept the position. The Rev Mr. Temple has been pastor at Washington for more than eight years, having come from Pittsburg, where he was pastor of a Reformed Presbyterian church in the East End. His liberal views, however, were responsible for a conflict with some of the high church officials and he and several other ministers left the denomination.

ST. ANTHONY'S DAY OBSERVED.

Chapel of the Late Father Mollinger on Troy Hill Crowded For the Occasion.

Pittsburg, June 14.—Yesterday was the day of the feast of St. Anthony of Padua in the Roman Catholic church and throughout the entire civilized world it is more or less observed. This day made Troy Hill, Allegheny, known throughout the world through the late Father Mollinger, who at the shrine he erected on Troy Hill, in honor of his patron saint, was used as God's agent in granting cures to those having faith.

Early yesterday morning the Troy Hill and Mt. Troy cars were crowded with persons going to the church. The first service was high mass at 6 a.m., which was sang by Father J. B. Duffner, pastor of the church. At 7:30 there was a second high mass, sung by Father J. Sedlnair. The solemn high mass at 9:30 was the event of the day. The celebrant was Father A. A. Lambing, of Wilkinsburg; the deacon, Father Bulliar, of Homestead, and the sub-deacon, Father Schram, of Allentown, while Father Leonard Stenger was master of ceremonies. The sermon was delivered by Father Devlin, of the Holy Cross church.

Last evening Father Palich delivered a sermon in German in the church.

There was a great demand for small bottles of holy water, prepared especially for the occasion. The demand was greater than in former years.

FEARS CHOLERA'S RAVAGES.

Smallpox Prevalent.

Washington, June 14.—A rather alarming situation with regard to the epidemic of cholera in the Philippines was set out in a report received by Surgeon General Forewood from Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman, at present in charge of the medical department of the army in the islands. The report says in part:

The appearance of the disease at Manila in March was attributed in some quarters to vegetables coming into the islands from infected Chinese ports, and in others to the drinking of Pasig river water, foul with the sewage of the city. Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman said that the number of different points attacked by the epidemic and the consequent infection of many streams makes probable a large number of deaths before the rains shall occur, which ended the two great epidemics in the eighties. The army, he says, is much better protected than the native population or than civilian Americans in the islands, because of the care which is exercised in supplying good food and water.

In Manila alone a total of 277 cases, with 215 deaths, had occurred up to April 15, the date of the report, with 453 cases and 308 deaths outside the city. In the provinces the disease attacked 22 different places. In the Camarines, at Nueva Cacares, the disease appeared, and this has been the only point where the army has suffered, two cavalrymen and an infantryman having the disease. The colored troops naturally mix much more with the natives than the whites, drinking the water in the shacks which they visit, and eating native food, and they are thus much more liable to contract cholera.

Smallpox has also appeared and has been more prevalent, it is stated, this year than in any, except the first, of American occupation. The wife of an American army officer in Manila has been attacked by it.

CONDEMNED MEN BAPTIZED.

Charles Davis and Henry Taylor Receive Rites of Baptist Church, In Pittsburg Jail.

Pittsburg, June 14.—In accordance with the doctrines of the religious faith accepted by the two condemned murderers, Charles Davis and Henry Taylor, both colored, yesterday afternoon the sacrament of baptism according to the rites of the Baptist church was administered to the two persons. This is the first time that an immersion was held in the county jail, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. D. Patterson, of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Howard avenue, Allegheny. Taylor will be hanged on June 24 and Davis will walk to the gallows two days later.

CAPT. CROZIER'S NOMINATION.

Senate Considered the Matter In Executive Session.

Washington, June 14.—During the greater part of yesterday the senate was in executive session, the nomination of Captain Crozier to be chief of ordnance of the army being the particular subject under consideration.

The president's message urging the establishment of reciprocity relations between the United States and Cuba was received after the senate had gone into secret session. The doors were opened, the message read and then the secret session was resumed.

The Freeman's Journal is also a defendant. Lord De Freyne seeks an injunction and damages.

Altogether 30 writs have been issued in the De Freyne action. The action is really taken by the landlords' association, and it is the beginning of a struggle of the organized landlords against the United Irish League, which is feared to be severe and far-reaching, as the landlords have ample backing.

John Redmond, in an interview in the house of commons last night, frankly admitted that this was the biggest move the landlords, with the support of Dublin Castle, had yet undertaken against the Irish National movement.

Colonel Saunderson, a Conservative member of the house of commons and lord lieutenant of County Calvin, in an interview on the subject, said:

"Yes, an organized attack must be met by organized action, and the Irish landlords have now resolved to take such action. The same course will be followed wherever they have been attacked by the league. I am happy to say that there are sufficient funds behind the landlords to fight any battles which may arise."

DEPUTIES WERE WITHDRAWN.

Strikers Promised No Violence at Pawtucket.

Pawtucket, R. I., June 14.—Action which the authorities hope means the beginning of the end of the reign of violence incident to the street railway strike was taken yesterday by High Sheriff Hunter C. White removing his deputy sheriffs from the street cars. He did this on representations made to him that the deputies accomplished no good purpose, but incited the crowds to violence.

After the withdrawal of these men the city became quiet. The 1,500 troops ordered out by Governor Kimball Thursday were still on duty yesterday, but if conditions warrant they will be withdrawn gradually, the first instalment to leave today. There was no rioting yesterday. Seven men were arrested for misdemeanors committed on Pawtucket avenue, the route of cars from Providence to this city. The lines of the Pawtucket city system of the United Traction company were not in operation, and the lines in Central Falls, Cumberland and Albion, suburban towns, were tied up. Today it is proposed to reopen the city system under the protection of the police, assisted by the militia.

Rev. Mr. Temple May Accept.

Washington, Pa., June 14.—The Rev. Henry W. Temple, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church of Washington, has been elected to the presidency of Monmouth college, at Monmouth, Ills. It is understood that he will accept the position. The Rev Mr. Temple has been pastor at Washington for more than eight years, having come from Pittsburg, where he was pastor of a Reformed Presbyterian church in the East End. His liberal views, however, were responsible for a conflict with some of the high church officials and he and several other ministers left the denomination.

ST. ANTHONY'S DAY OBSERVED.

Pittsburg, June 14.—Yesterday was the day of the feast of St. Anthony of Padua in the Roman Catholic church and throughout the entire civilized world it is more or less observed. This day made Troy Hill, Allegheny, known throughout the world through the late Father Mollinger, who at the shrine he erected on Troy Hill, in honor of his patron saint, was used as God's agent in granting cures to those having faith.

Early yesterday morning the Troy Hill and Mt. Troy cars were crowded with persons going to the church. The first service was high mass at 6 a .m., which was sang by Father J. B. Duffner, pastor of the church. At 7:30 there was a second high mass, sung by Father J. Sedlnair. The solemn high mass at 9:30 was the event of the day. The celebrant was Father A. A. Lambing, of Wilkinsburg; the deacon, Father Bulliar, of Homestead, and the sub-deacon, Father Schram, of Allentown, while Father Leonard Stenger was master of ceremonies. The sermon was delivered by Father Devlin, of the Holy Cross church.

There was a great demand for small bottles of holy water, prepared especially for the occasion. The demand was greater than in former years.

FEARS CHOLERA'S RAVAGES.

Smallpox Prevalent.

Washington, June 14.—A rather alarming situation with regard to the epidemic of cholera in the Philippines was set out in a report received by Surgeon General Forewood from Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman, at present in charge of the medical department of the army in the islands. The report says in part:

The appearance of the disease at Manila in March was attributed in some quarters to vegetables coming into the islands from infected Chinese ports, and in others to the drinking of Pasig river water, foul with the sewage of the city. Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman said that the number of different points attacked by the epidemic and the consequent infection of many streams makes probable a large number of deaths before the rains shall occur, which ended the two great epidemics in the eighties. The army, he says, is much better protected than the native population or than civilian Americans in the islands, because of the care which is exercised in supplying good food and water.

In Manila alone a total of 277 cases, with 215 deaths, had occurred up to April 15, the date of the report, with 453 cases and 308 deaths outside the city. In the provinces the disease attacked 22 different places. In the Camarines, at Nueva Caceres, the disease appeared, and this has been the only point where the army has suffered, two cavalrymen and an infantryman having the disease. The colored troops naturally mix much more with the natives than the whites, drinking the water in the shacks which they visit, and eating native food, and they are thus much more liable to contract cholera.

Smallpox has also appeared and has been more prevalent, it is stated, this year than in any, except the first, of American occupation. The wife of an American army officer in Manila has been attacked by it.

CONDEMNED MEN BAPTIZED.

Charles Davis and Henry Taylor Receive Rites of Baptist Church, In Pittsburg Jail.

Pittsburg, June 14.—In accordance with the doctrines of the religious faith accepted by the two condemned murderers, Charles Davis and Henry Taylor, both colored, yesterday afternoon the sacrament of baptism according to the rites of the Baptist church was administered to the two persons. This is the first time that an immersion was held in the county jail, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. D. Patterson, of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Howard avenue, Allegheny. Taylor will be hanged on June 24 and Davis will walk to the gallows two days later.

CAPT. CROZIER'S NOMINATION.

Senate Considered the Matter In Executive Session.

Washington, June 14.—During the greater part of yesterday the senate was in executive session, the nomination of Captain Crozier to be chief of ordnance of the army being the particular subject under consideration.

The president's message urging the establishment of reciprocity relations between the United States and Cuba was received after the senate had gone into secret session. The doors were opened, the message read and then the secret session was resumed.

PIMPLES

And other eruptions which mar the skin are more than a disfigurement and annoyance; they are a positive detriment to the business interests and social successes of the man they mark. Other things being equal, the man with a smooth skin and clear complexion will find it easier to get a good position or a good wife than the man whose face shows the impurity of his blood. That's the real point. The blood is bad. And for that very reason any treatment which is designed to cleanse the skin must cleanse the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cleanses the blood from the clogging impurities which breed and feed disease, and so cures pimples, boils, eczema, and other diseases which have their cause in impure blood.

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I have used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' in a case of scrofula, and cured it," writes Mr. Wm. D. Shamblin, of Remy, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Territory. "I took five bottles of it for my blood. I had 'ringworms' on me and I would burn them off and they would come right back, and they were on me when I commenced using 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which took them away, and I haven't been bothered anymore."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

Temperature of Forests.

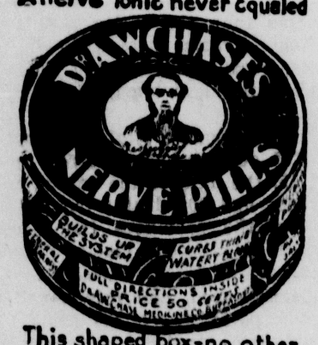

For many years the Swiss government has been making observations through its forestry stations on the temperature of the air, of the trees and the soil in the forests. These observations show that the temperature in the forests is always below the temperature outside. The temperature also varies according to the trees composing the forests.

A beech forest is always cooler than a forest of larch. As to the trunks of the trees, they are always cooler than the surrounding air. Regarding the temperature of the soil, it is found that in the forest the temperature is invariably below that of the air. Outside the forest the soil is always warmer than the air in summer and colder in winter.

Preserving a Shark's Head.

When a big shark is taken on board ship, the skull is usually preserved, the flesh being removed from the bones, and it is a favorite pastime with sailors to crawl one after another through the distended jaws. It would be far from safe to do this, however, when the head has been but freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything be placed between them.

The Moslem Creed.

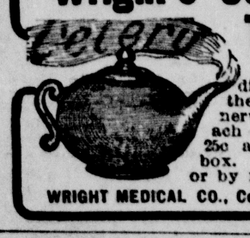

A German Christian missionary who has worked for many years among the Mohammedans says: "Honesty compels every candid student to acknowledge that the old view formerly entertained in Christian circles concerning Mohammedanism, according to which the teachings of the great Arabian prophet are nothing but devil's doctrines and dogmas, is altogether incorrect. In reality, Mohammedanism is nothing but a rationalistic type of Christianity in the form of a most unfortunate state religion. The times are past when scolding about the Moslem creed as the production of the devil will satisfy, and the struggle against Islam on these premises is a failure. Practically all of the mission literature that in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was written against Mohammedanism is useless."

NO DIMINUTION IN TRADE.

None Apparent From Labor Controversies, Owing to Agricultural Prosperity.

New York, June, 14.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, issued today, said in part:

No diminution in business is apparent from labor controversies, owing to the prosperous condition of the agricultural sections and the bright outlook for this year's crops. Retail distribution of light weight wearing apparel has felt the stimulus of higher temperature. Railway earnings in May were 8.7 per cent larger than last year and 21.7 per cent above those of 1900.

There continues to be a wide discrepancy between the amount of business offered and the contracts closed in many branches of the iron and steel industry, owing to the inability of producers to assure delivery at a specified time. Contracts running well into next year indicate that the end of activity is not near. Pressure is still most conspicuous for railway and structural supplies, and agricultural implement works are crowded with orders. Sales of Bessemer pig iron at Pittsburg for delivery next year were recently made at $16.50, while immediate shipments command about $5 more. Limited stocks are still the cause of steadiness in all branches of textiles. Holders are not urging sales and buyers show a disposition to wait. Tardy deliveries of sample pieces by the woolen mills has caused complaint among the clothiers and fall orders are not placed freely. Wool sells more freely at leading eastern markets and quotations are steady.

BROADENED, FINAL HOUR.

But Market Was Dull and Hesitating Most of Friday.

New York, June 14.—After a dull and hesitating market during the greater part of yesterday with isolated upward movements here and there, the market broadened in the final hour and moved upwards quite generally with a considerable show of strength. The activity was attributed to the same speculative leader who had been concerned in all recent important movements, and whose return to Wall street this week gave immediate rise to a show of awakening. Whatever the motive of the buying, the bull leadership secured a larger following yesterday than at any time this week, notwithstanding a number of news developments not immediately encouraging to a rise in prices. The preliminary figures of the week's currency movement, which are usually the center of interest in a Friday's market, gave no promise of a strong bank statement. The subtreasury absorption of $2,406,000 apparently has been little more than offset by the balance of receipts from the interior.

The advance of a point or over in the Reading stocks was an important sympathetic influence upon the late market, but there was no news to show a prospect of an early settlement of the strike. The increase in the demand for stocks was incontestable nevertheless. In some cases the movement was due to individual causes. Sugar advanced on the oversold condition of the market for the refined product and was benefitted also by the reports of a special presidential message to congress reinforcing the recommendation for Cuban reciprocity.

There were a number of very large individual buying orders for Mexican Central executed in the early market but the buying was not followed up. The drop of 8½ points in General Electric was probably due to reports of a new combination of electrical manufacturing companies, backed by influential capitalists. The stock afterwards rallied four points. Chicago and Eastern Illinois rose 4½ points further on persisting rumors of an offer for control. The day's reports of railroad earnings showed a continuance of the increases over last year's corresponding period. The market closed rather quiet, but steady.

There was a large demand for Wabash debenture Bs at an advance of 2½ per cent. The Burlington joint 4s were also in demand. The market generally was firm. Total sales, par value, 3,690,000.

United States 3s declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

Manias of Authors.

In a recent article on the "Mania of Authors" in the Revue Universelle of Paris we are told that Darwin always practiced on his old fiddle before writing; Chateaubriand while dictating to his secretary was in the habit of walking in his bare feet; Schiller and Goethe could not write unless their feet were on ice; Lord Derby always filled his mouth with brandy cherries; Fenimore Cooper used to chew gumdrops; Byron filled his pockets with truffles; Theophile Gautier burned incense.

An Insinuating Missive.

He was a German student, and this was the letter he addressed to his uncle:

Dear Uncle—A very strange thing happened yesterday. I went to see a friend of mine at the bank who knows your handwriting very well, and he thought you were ill, as I had not lately presented any checks signed by you. He begs to be remembered to you, as also do I, and you might let my friend see your signature again. If you are very busy, you might send a blank check, and I will fill it in. Yours affectionately, KARL.

NO SECRET DICKERS BY RAILROAD LINES

HE NEVER SPOKE AGAIN.

The Dog That Served the Purpose of a Ventriloquist.

The following story is told of a ventriloquist, now famous, but at the time of this happening so hard up he used to walk between the cities where he was to appear. On one of these tours he came to Philadelphia on foot, and on the road he picked up a miserable little dog "because it looked so much like he felt." The story will explain what became of the dog.

The first house he came to was a saloon, and of course he wanted a drink. He had no money, but went in anyhow to see what he could do. The proprietor, a German, said:

"Well, what will you have?"

He said, "I'll take a little whisky," and then, turning to the dog, he asked:

"What will you have?"

The answer came very promptly:

"I'll take a ham sandwich."

The German was so surprised he almost fainted. He looked at the dog a moment and then asked:

"What did you say?"

The dog replied:

"I said a ham sandwich."

Hans thought it wonderful that a dog should be able to talk and asked who had trained him, how long it had taken, etc., and wound up with:

"How much you take for him?"

"Oh," said Mr. Ventriloquist, "I wouldn't sell him at any price, but I am a little hard up now, and if you will lend me $50 I'll leave him with you till I bring back the money."

"All right," said Hans. "I just want him for a little while so I can show him to some smart people I know around here."

So everything was settled, the money paid, etc., and as the ventriloquist went out he turned and waved his hand to the dog and said:

"Well, goodby, Jack. I'll come back soon."

The dog looked at him and said:

"You mean son of a gun, to sell me for $50 after all I've done for you! So help me Moses, I'll never speak another word as long as I live!"

And he didn't.—Philadelphia Times.

FLOWER AND TREE.

There is a pink variety of lily of the valley which is often grown in England, though seldom seen with us.

A palm tree which grows on the banks of the Amazon has leaves thirty to fifty feet in length and ten to twelve feet in breadth.

Standard and "stand by" plants and varieties should be the rule of the beginner. Experiment with new flowers and varieties only in a small way.

Study color effects if you would have a really beautiful garden. The loveliest colors often neutralize each other sadly. Clear reds and magentas, for instance, should not be close neighbors.

Know the plants as you would people if you would have them respond fully. Find out their habits, their likes and dislikes. The study is one of unfailing pleasure, and it pays rich interest in perpetual bloom.

Linnia plants are good for low hedges. Plants a foot and a half apart will soon run branches together, and the foliage is dense from the ground up. The flowers are almost as brilliant as those of the dahlia and are produced freely from July to late October.

Always Wash Before They Pray.

Moslems always bathe before they pray. They would not dare enter the house of prayer with unclean hands or feet or faces; hence when the muezzin's call is heard from the minaret five times a day faithful Moslems go first to the fountains that are found outside of every mosque and bathe themselves. There are innumerable bathhouses also in which genuine Turkish baths and massage are given.

At the same time their houses are positively filthy—too filthy, as a rule, for human beings to occupy—and the streets of Constantinople and every other Turkish town are indescribable in their nastiness. The clothing they wear is as dirty as their bodies are clean, and their food is often unfit for sanitary reasons.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Lion and the Unicorn.

The unicorn came into the royal arms with James I. It belongs to the royal arms of Scotland. The signet ring of Mary, mother of James, is in existence, having a unicorn on it. In the royal arms therefore one supporter represents England, the other Scotland.

The lion and the unicorn occur also in ancient Buddhist scriptures, placed together as supporters. Both of these animals also are seen playing draughts together in the well known Egyptian painting. But the oldest connection of the two is in the blessing of Jacob and of Moses.—Notes and Queries.

Ground Floors Scarce.

The trouble with most schemes is that when you go in the ground floor is occupied, and you are compelled to occupy the second story.—Atchison Globe.

RELICS OF EARLY DAYS.

Rail Fences and Dugout Canoes Survive Civilization's March.

One of the remarkable features of country life in America is the singular persistence of the rail fence and the dugout canoe. No matter how thickly settled a section may become or how long it may have been settled, these two survivors of early settlement linger on as stubbornly as ever. Today in the thickest settled parts of New England and New York the rail fence is met with, while the shad fishermen of the Potomac and James rivers and Chesapeake bay, on the banks of which the first English settlements in America were established, still manufacture and employ the old dugout canoe in making the rounds of their shad nets.

The dugout canoe is the simplest and most primitive water craft known and was used by prehistoric man, both in this country, Europe and Asia. It is made out of a log of wood by trimming the outside down to the proper proportions of a boat and by "digging out" the inside with an adz and by the aid of fire. The Potomac river dugout is today pretty much the same as it was in the days of Powhatan and differs from the general run of dugout canoes in the absence of a curved bow and stern and in having rather high sides, which rise to a summit from either end of the boat, being highest in the middle, where the seat is placed.—Washington Post.

Canny In Second Engagement.

For years a young man and young woman had been engaged, and each had economized with a view of having the more to spend when they should marry. Six months ago, however, the engagement was broken, and shortly afterward the young woman became the fiancee of another man. This man she encourages to spend his money lavishly—on her. He has bought her beautiful silver for her toilet table, the latest design and engraved with her initials; a handsome leather traveling bag completely fitted out, rugs, books and other articles to make home comfortable.

"No more economizing for me," says the girl. "If he invests so much in me, we won't be so likely to quarrel, and certainly he will not have the money to spend on another girl," which is the wisdom that rules sentiment in these modern days.—New York Press.

Those Dull Ducks.

I recall Mr. Lowell telling, jocosely, in an after dinner speech in Cambridge how he met an acquaintance (of rather dubious standing) whose cheerful face and happy demeanor led him to ask the cause of such exuberant felicity.

"Why," said the genial smiler, "I've discovered a way to make my fortune. We all know that the reason for the fine flavor of the wild duck is the wild celery on which it feeds. Now, I propose to feed it to the domestic duck and supply the market."

Some weeks later, on meeting his acquaintance again, Mr. Lowell found him quite depressed and inconsolable. "Why are you looking so unhappy? I thought the last time I saw you that you were on the point of making your fortune with ducks. Wouldn't it work?"

"No," was the reply; "the things won't eat it."—Atlantic.

"Ah," exclaimed Mrs. Oldcastle as she took a book from the table in the magnificent library of the new neighbors, "hand laid paper, isn't it?"

"Is it?" her hostess asked, looking at it doubtfully. "I told Josiah when I bought them books that that's one of the set of that he was payin' a whole lot too much. I'm glad it wasn't me. If I'd of went and give such a price for something that was hand laid, I'd never hear the last of it from him. That's the real point. The blood is bad. And for that very reason any treatment which is designed to cleanse the skin must cleanse the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cleanses the blood from the clogging impurities which breed and feed disease, and so cures pimples, boils, eczema, and other diseases which have their cause in impure blood.

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I have used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' in a case of scrofula, and cured it," writes Mr. Wm. D. Shamblin, of Remy, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Territory. "I took five bottles of it for my blood. I had 'ringworms' on me and I would burn them off and they would come right back, and they were on me when I commenced using 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which took them away, and I haven't been bothered anymore."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

Temperature of Forests.

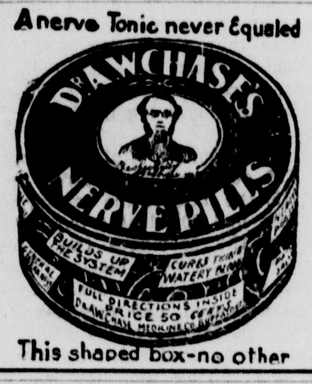

For many years the Swiss government has been making observations through its forestry stations on the temperature of the air, of the trees and the soil in the forests. These observations show that the temperature in the forests is always below the temperature outside. The temperature also varies according to the trees composing the forests.

A beech forest is always cooler than a forest of larch. As to the trunks of the trees, they are always cooler than the surrounding air. Regarding the temperature of the soil, it is found that in the forest the temperature is invariably below that of the air. Outside the forest the soil is always warmer than the air in summer and colder in winter.

Preserving a Shark's Head.

When a big shark is taken on board ship, the skull is usually preserved, the flesh being removed from the bones, and it is a favorite pastime with sailors to crawl one after another through the distended jaws. It would be far from safe to do this, however, when the head has been but freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything be placed between them.

The Moslem Creed.

A German Christian missionary who has worked for many years among the Mohammedans says: "Honesty compels every candid student to acknowledge that the old view formerly entertained in Christian circles concerning Mohammedanism, according to which the teachings of the great Arabian prophet are nothing but devil's doctrines and dogmas, is altogether incorrect. In reality, Mohammedanism is nothing but a rationalistic type of Christianity in the form of a most unfortunate state religion. The times are past when scolding about the Moslem creed as the production of the devil will satisfy, and the struggle against Islam on these premises is a failure. Practically all of the mission literature that in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was written against Mohammedanism is useless."

A Novelty In Hair.

What is home without a fashion paper? Here we pick up one of these valuable journals, and this is the first item of important information which meets the inquiring eye:

"Hair is worn on the top of the head." So glad to learn it! We always supposed it was worn on the soles of the feet.

None Apparent From Labor Controversies, Owing to Agricultural Prosperity.

No diminution in business is apparent from labor controversies, owing to the prosperous condition of the agricultural sections and the bright outlook for this year's crops. Retail distribution of light weight wearing apparel has felt the stimulus of higher temperature. Railway earnings in May were 8.7 per cent larger than last year and 21.7 per cent above those of 1900.

There continues to be a wide discrepancy between the amount of business offered and the contracts closed in many branches of the iron and steel industry, owing to the inability of producers to assure delivery at a specified time. Contracts running well into next year indicate that the end of activity is not near. Pressure is still most conspicuous for railway and structural supplies, and agricultural implement works are crowded with orders. Sales of Bessemer pig iron at Pittsburg for delivery next year were recently made at $16.50 while immediate shipments command about $5 more. Limited stocks are still the cause of steadiness in all branches of textiles. Holders are not urging sales and buyers show a disposition to wait. Tardy deliveries of sample pieces by the woolen mills has caused complaint among the clothiers and fall orders are not placed freely. Wool sells more freely at leading eastern markets and quotations are steady.

BROADENED, FINAL HOUR.

But Market Was Dull and Hesitating Most of Friday.

New York, June 14.—After a dull and hesitating market during the greater part of yesterday with isolated upward movements here and there, the market broadened in the final hour and moved upwards quite generally with a considerable show of strength. The activity was attributed to the same speculative leader who had been concerned in all recent important movements, and whose return to Wall street this week gave immediate rise to a show of awakening. Whatever the motive of the buying, the bull leadership secured a larger following yesterday than at any time this week, notwithstanding a number of news developments not immediately encouraging to a rise in prices. The preliminary figures of the week's currency movement, which are usually the center of interest in a Friday's market, gave no promise of a strong bank statement. The subtreasury absorption of $2,406,000 apparently has been little more than offset by the balance of receipts from the interior.

The advance of a point or over in the Reading stocks was an important sympathetic influence upon the late market, but there was no news to show a prospect of an early settlement of the strike. The increase in the demand for stocks was incontestable nevertheless. In some cases the movement was due to individual causes. Sugar advanced on the oversold condition of the market for the refined product and was benefitted also by the reports of a special presidential message to congress reinforcing the recommendation for Cuban reciprocity.

There were a number of very large individual buying orders for Mexican Central executed in the early market but the buying was not followed up. The drop of 8½ points in General Electric was probably due to reports of a new combination of electrical manufacturing companies, backed by influential capitalists. The stock afterwards rallied four points. Chicago and Eastern Illinois rose 4½ points further on persisting rumors of an offer for control. The day's reports of railroad earnings showed a continuance of the increases over last year's corresponding period. The market closed rather quiet, but steady.

There was a large demand for Wabash debenture Bs at an advance of 2½ per cent. The Burlington joint 4s were also in demand. The market generally was firm. Total sales, par value, 3,690,000.

Manias of Authors.

In a recent article on the "Mania of Authors" in the Revue Universelle of Paris we are told that Darwin always practiced on his old fiddle before writing; Chateaubriand while dictating to his secretary was in the habit of walking in his bare feet; Schiller and Goethe could not write unless their feet were on ice; Lord Derby always filled his mouth with brandy cherries; Fenimore Cooper used to chew gumdrops; Byron filled his pockets with truffles; Theophile Gautier burned incense.

An Insinuating Missive.

He was a German student, and this was the letter he addressed to his uncle:

Dear Uncle—A very strange thing happened yesterday. I went to see a friend of mine at the bank who knows your handwriting very well, and he thought you were ill, as I had not lately presented any checks signed by you. He begs to be remembered to you, as also do I, and you might let my friend see your signature again. If you are very busy, you might send a blank check, and I will fill it in. Yours affectionately, KARL.

NO SECRET DICKERS BY RAILROAD LINES

By MARTIN W. KNAPP, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission

THE STATE HAS AS MUCH RIGHT TO FARM OUT THE BUSINESS OF COLLECTING ITS REVENUES OR PRESERVING THE PEACE AND ALLOW THE PARTIES INTRUSTED WITH THESE DUTIES TO VARY THE RATE OF TAXATION ACCORDING TO THEIR OWN INTERESTS OR TO SELL PERSONAL PROTECTION TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER AS IT HAS TO PERMIT THE GREAT FUNCTION OF PUBLIC CARRIAGE TO BE THE SUBJECT OF SPECIAL BARGAINS OR SECRET DICKER TO BE MADE UNEQUAL BY FAVORITISM OR OPPRESSIVE BY EXTORTION.

HE NEVER SPOKE AGAIN.

The Dog That Served the Purpose of a Ventriloquist.

The following story is told of a ventriloquist, now famous, but at the time of this happening so hard up he used to walk between the cities where he was to appear. On one of these tours he came to Philadelphia on foot, and on the road he picked up a miserable little dog "because it looked so much like he felt." The story will explain what became of the dog.

The first house he came to was a saloon, and of course he wanted a drink. He had no money, but went in anyhow to see what he could do. The proprietor, a German, said:

"Well, what will you have?"

He said, "I'll take a little whisky," and then, turning to the dog, he asked:

"What will you have?"

The answer came very promptly:

"I'll take a ham sandwich."

The German was so surprised he almost fainted. He looked at the dog a moment and then asked:

"What did you say?"

The dog replied:

"I said a ham sandwich."

Hans thought it wonderful that a dog should be able to talk and asked who had trained him, how long it had taken, etc., and wound up with:

"How much you take for him?"

"Oh," said Mr. Ventriloquist, "I wouldn't sell him at any price, but I am a little hard up now, and if you will lend me $50 I'll leave him with you till I bring back the money."

"All right," said Hans. "I just want him for a little while so I can show him to some smart people I know around here."

So everything was settled, the money paid, etc., and as the ventriloquist went out he turned and waved his hand to the dog and said:

"Well, goodby, Jack. I'll come back soon."

The dog looked at him and said:

"You mean son of a gun, to sell me for $50 after all I've done for you! So help me Moses, I'll never speak another word as long as I live!"

FLOWER AND TREE.

There is a pink variety of lily of the valley which is often grown in England, though seldom seen with us.

A palm tree which grows on the banks of the Amazon has leaves thirty to fifty feet in length and ten to twelve feet in breadth.

Standard and "stand by" plants and varieties should be the rule of the beginner. Experiment with new flowers and varieties only in a small way.

Study color effects if you would have a really beautiful garden. The loveliest colors often neutralize each other sadly. Clear reds and magentas, for instance, should not be close neighbors.

Know the plants as you would people if you would have them respond fully. Find out their habits, their likes and dislikes. The study is one of unfailing pleasure, and it pays rich interest in perpetual bloom.

Linnia plants are good for low hedges. Plants a foot and a half apart will soon run branches together, and the foliage is dense from the ground up. The flowers are almost as brilliant as those of the dahlia and are produced freely from July to late October.

Always Wash Before They Pray.

Moslems always bathe before they pray. They would not dare enter the house of prayer with unclean hands or feet or faces; hence when the muezzin's call is heard from the minaret five times a day faithful Moslems go first to the fountains that are found outside of every mosque and bathe themselves. There are innumerable bathhouses also in which genuine Turkish baths and massage are given.

At the same time their houses are positively filthy—too filthy, as a rule, for human beings to occupy—and the streets of Constantinople and every other Turkish town are indescribable in their nastiness. The clothing they wear is as dirty as their bodies are clean, and their food is often unfit for sanitary reasons.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Lion and the Unicorn.

The unicorn came into the royal arms with James I. It belongs to the royal arms of Scotland. The signet ring of Mary, mother of James, is in existence, having a unicorn on it. In the royal arms therefore one supporter represents England, the other Scotland.

The lion and the unicorn occur also in ancient Buddhist scriptures, placed together as supporters. Both of these animals also are seen playing draughts together in the well known Egyptian painting. But the oldest connection of the two is in the blessing of Jacob and of Moses.—Notes and Queries.

Ground Floors Scarce.

The trouble with most schemes is that when you go in the ground floor is occupied, and you are compelled to occupy the second story.—Atchison Globe.

RELICS OF EARLY DAYS.

One of the remarkable features of country life in America is the singular persistence of the rail fence and the dugout canoe. No matter how thickly settled a section may become or how long it may have been settled, these two survivors of early settlement linger on as stubbornly as ever. Today in the thickest settled parts of New England and New York the rail fence is met with, while the shad fishermen of the Potomac and James rivers and Chesapeake bay, on the banks of which the first English settlements in America were established, still manufacture and employ the old dugout canoe in making the rounds of their shad nets.

The dugout canoe is the simplest and most primitive water craft known and was used by prehistoric man, both in this country, Europe and Asia. It is made out of a log of wood by trimming the outside down to the proper proportions of a boat and by "digging out" the inside with an adz and by the aid of fire. The Potomac river dugout is today pretty much the same as it was in the days of Powhatan and differs from the general run of dugout canoes in the absence of a curved bow and stern and in having rather high sides, which rise to a summit from either end of the boat, being highest in the middle, where the seat is placed.—Washington Post.

Canny In Second Engagement.

For years a young man and young woman had been engaged, and each had economized with a view of having the more to spend when they should marry. Six months ago, however, the engagement was broken, and shortly afterward the young woman became the fiancee of another man. This man she encourages to spend his money lavishly—on her. He has bought her beautiful silver for her toilet table, the latest design and engraved with her initials; a handsome leather traveling bag completely fitted out, rugs, books and other articles to make home comfortable.

"No more economizing for me," says the girl. "If he invests so much in me, we won't be so likely to quarrel, and certainly he will not have the money to spend on another girl," which is the wisdom that rules sentiment in these modern days.—New York Press.

Those Dull Ducks.

I recall Mr. Lowell telling, jocosely, in an after dinner speech in Cambridge how he met an acquaintance (of [illegible] ous standing) whose cheerful face and happy demeanor led him to ask the cause of such exuberant felicity.

"Why," said the genial smiler, "I've discovered a way to make my fortune. We all know that the reason for the fine flavor of the wild duck is the wild celery on which it feeds. Now, I propose to feed it to the domestic duck and supply the market."

Some weeks later, on meeting his acquaintance again, Mr. Lowell found him quite depressed and inconsolable. "Why are you looking so unhappy? I thought the last time I saw you that you were on the point of making your fortune with ducks. Wouldn't it work?"

"No," was the reply; "the things won't eat it."—Atlantic.

Swindled Again.

"Ah," exclaimed Mrs. Oldcastle as she took a book from the table in the magnificent library of the new neighbors, "hand laid paper, isn't it?"

"Is it?" her hostess asked, looking at it doubtfully. "I told Josiah when I bought them books that that's one of the set of that he was payin' a whole lot too much. I'm glad it wasn't me. If I'd of went and give such a price for something that was hand laid, I'd never hear the last of it from him. But he wouldn't believe it when I told him he was cheated, because I seen the same set with nearly three times more gilt on the bindin's for a lower price. WHISKEY CAUSED HIS HANGING.

Christian, on the Gallows, Attributed His Crime to Excessive Use of Liquor.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 14.—Perry Christian, the Fayette county murderer, was hanged yesterday afternoon in the state penitentiary at Moundsville. Christian faced the gallows bravely, admitted his crime and attributed it to the excessive use of whisky.

The crime for which Christian paid penalty was the result of a drinking bout. He was serving time for a crime committed in Ohio and was paroled before the completion of his sentence. He came to a lumber camp in Fayette county, W. Va., and became associated with a rough drinking gang. While under the influence of liquor he killed William Dent.

Governor Nash and Senator Foraker, of Ohio, attempted to intercede on behalf of Christian, but Governor White ignored their entreaties.

FULLER STATED FOR THE JOB.

To Be Secretary of State of Pennsylvania, if Pennypacker Is Elected.

Pittsburg, June 14.—A local paper asserted last evening the following in part:

"It is not generally known that Frank Fuller, of Fayette county, has been slated for the secretaryship of the commonwealth under Penny packer, but such is the case. Fuller controls the politics of Fayette and delivered five delegates to Pennypacker. This is a rather small number of delegates to demand so large a reward, but the pledge of the position was made when the delegates were very much needed."

One Failure.

"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband who had just refused his wife a bonnet in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well," replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."

A Secret.

"Rich! Why so?"

"Because I want to be petted. Ma says you are an old fool, but must be petted because you are rich. But it's a great secret, and I mustn't tell it!"

Thrilling Moments.

"Johnnie," called the mother, "I want you to go to the store for me."

"Wait a second, maw," replied the youth, who was absorbed in a five cent volume. "Pepperhole Pete has thirty-seven Injuns to kill, an' it'll only take him about two minutes."—Ohio State Journal.

A HARD STRUGGLE

Many an East Liverpool Citizen Finds the Struggle Hard.

With a back constantly aching.

Daily existence is one of struggle.

No need to keep it up.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.

East Liverpool people endorse this claim.

Mr. Henry Bevington, who resides at the corner of Avondale and Bradshaw avenue, says: "During three years I had attacks of dull, steady aching in the back. When stooping or sitting for some time it would change to a quick pang as I arose to an upright position. My back tired out easily when walking or standing long, and I often had headaches, dizziness, and in the mornings great depression. I took medicines, many of them, but found Doan's Kidney Pills, sold at the W. & W. pharmacy, to be more suitable for my complaint than anything I had ever tried."

MONEY IN LETTER BOXES.

People Who Try to Pay Postage In That Way.

"Here are two pennies just turned in to the superintendent of delivery by one of the carriers," remarked an official of the Washington city postoffice a few days ago. "The amount of cash gathered up by the collectors of mail is really surprising. Hardly a day passes without a certain percentage of the coin of the realm finding its way to my desk through the medium of the street letter boxes.

"It is hard to believe, but hundreds of persons every day in the year drop unstamped letters in the box with pennies to accompany them to cover the postage. They think the money will do just as well as stamps. But they are mistaken. All such unstamped letters, if there is no identifying mark on the envelope, ultimately land in the dead letter office.

"It often happens," added the postal official, "that coins placed in envelopes for transmission work their way through the paper. In nine cases out of ten, even when the money so lost is no more than a dime, this office is notified of the occurrence by the loser, who requests that he be reimbursed."—Washington Star.

Lonely In the Gallery.

Years ago our theaters did not have the large audiences they now have, and it was a common sight to see a house of "empty benches."

"I was employed at the gallery box office of one of the theaters," says a reminiscent Philadelphian, "and one stormy evening sold but one ticket, that to a boy about thirteen years of age, who rushed up to the window and asked if I thought he could get a good seat. I replied that I thought he could. I felt sorry for the little fellow and wondered how he would feel sitting in the gallery all by himself. After the first act was over I was aroused by a tap on the window and, upon opening it, saw my solitary ticket purchaser standing there with a very sad expression on his face.

"'Mister,' he said, 'I'm the only one up there, and it's so lonesome that I am afraid to stay. Won't you give me another ticket, and I'll bring our gang around tomorrow night to help you out?'

"I took the lad to the manager and explained the situation. That boy witnessed the balance of the performance from a plush covered seat in the front row."—Philadelphia Times.

Winning a Kiss.

Aunt Hannah—I saw that young man kiss you, Jane. How did it come about?

Jane—In the most natural way in the world, auntie. He asked me if I would be offended if he kissed me, and I told him it was impossible for me to say until I knew what it was like.—Boston Transcript.

Men and Apes.

Were it not, as Huxley says, that "the ignorance of the so called educated classes is colossal," there might be need for apology in restatement of the fact that man is not descended from the ape. The relationship between them is lateral, not lineal, both being offshoots of the same stock, but each remaining, of course in very different degrees of development, isolated groups of mammals.—Edward Clodd's "Thomas Henry Huxley."

A Pair of Them.

He—The great trouble with Gabley is that he talks too much.

She—That's strange! When he has been with me, he scarcely said a word.

MISS ROSE OWENS,

No. 720 Seventeenth St., WASHINGTON, D. C.

"If every suffering woman has the same experience with Wine of Cardui that I had, your medicine will be most popular. About a year ago I began to have a worn out tired feeling with lassitude, pains in the back and head which kept increasing every month. I felt that I needed something, but to get the right medicine was the trouble. I finally decided on your Wine of Cardui and only needed to take three bottles when I was fully recovered."

Miss Rose Owens.

WHEN Miss Rose Owens, who has a responsible position in the Government service at Washington, D. C., decided to try Wine of Cardui, she made a wise choice. Over a million women have been relieved of female weakness by this same Wine of Cardui. It is not a strong medicine but may be taken every day in the year by any woman with benefit. It does not force results, but corrects derangements of the menstrual organs. It strengthens the nervous system, gives tone to the bodily functions, acts directly on the genital organs, and is the finest tonic for women known to the science of medicine.

If you are a suffering woman we would say to you that Wine of Cardui seldom fails to completely cure any case of female ills. We say emphatically, it never fails to benefit. Every day hundreds of sufferers are writing to our Ladies' Advisory Department. The letters are opened by persons competent to give advice. Mrs. Jones was cured by following the advice which was freely given her by the Ladies' Advisory Department. Miss Owens was cured without advice by just buying a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from her druggist and taking this great medicine in the privacy of her home. No doctor's examination, treatment or advice is necessary. You have read what these two cured women have written. Is this not enough to lead you to determine to be rid of suffering?

August 13, 1900, Mrs. W. H. Jones, of Cameron, Mo., writes:

"I suffered terribly at monthly periods for three years. I would sometimes go for seven months with no flow at all. Now I have my health back again and am expecting to be confined in January. I cannot praise your medicine enough."

WHISKEY CAUSED HIS HANGING.

Christian, on the Gallows, Attributed His Crime to Excessive Use of Liquor.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 14.—Perry Christian, the Fayette county murderer, was hanged yesterday afternoon in the state penitentiary at Moundsville. Christian faced the gallows bravely, admitted his crime and attributed it to the excessive use of whisky.

The crime for which Christian paid penalty was the result of a drinking bout. He was serving time for a crime committed in Ohio and was paroled before the completion of his sentence. He came to a lumber camp in Fayette county, W. Va., and became associated with a rough drinking gang. While under the influence of liquor he killed William Dent.

Governor Nash and Senator Foraker, of Ohio, attempted to intercede on behalf of Christian, but Governor White ignored their entreaties.

FULLER STATED FOR THE JOB.

To Be Secretary of State of Pennsylvania, if Pennypacker Is Elected.

Pittsburg, June 13.—A local paper asserted last evening the following in part:

the commonwealth under Pennypacker, but such is the case. Fuller controls the politics of Fayette and delivered five delegates to Pennypacker. This is a rather small number of delegates to demand so large a reward, but the pledge of the position was made when the delegates were very much needed."

One Failure.

"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband who had just refused his wife a bonnet in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well," replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."

A Secret.

"Rich! Why so?"

"Because I want to be petted. Ma says you are an old fool, but must be petted because you are rich. But it's a great secret, and I mustn't tell it!"

Thrilling Moments.

"Johnnie," called the mother, "I want you to go to the store for me."

"Wait a second, maw," replied the youth, who was absorbed in a five cent volume. "Pepperhole Pete has thirty-seven Injuns to kill, an' it'll only take him about two minutes."—Ohio State Journal.

Intellectual Slumming.

Querist—Doing any slumming these days?

A HARD STRUGGLE

Many an East Liverpool Citizen Finds the Struggle Hard.

With a back constantly aching.

Daily existence is one of struggle.

No need to keep it up.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.

East Liverpool people endorse this claim.

Mr. Henry Bevington, who resides at the corner of Avondale and Bradshaw avenue, says: "During three years I had attacks of dull, steady aching in the back. When stooping or sitting for some time it would change to a quick pang as I arose to an upright position. My back tired out easily when walking or standing long, and I often had headaches, dizziness, and in the mornings great depression. I took medicines, many of them, but found Doan's Kidney Pills, sold at the W. & W. pharmacy, to be more suitable for my complaint than anything I had ever tried."

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"Here are two pennies just turned in to the superintendent of delivery by one of the carriers," remarked an official of the Washington city postoffice a few days ago. "The amount of cash gathered up by the collectors of mail is really surprising. Hardly a day passes without a certain percentage of the coin of the realm finding its way to my desk through the medium of the street letter boxes.

"It is hard to believe, but hundreds of persons every day in the year drop unstamped letters in the box with pennies to accompany them to cover the postage. They think the money will do just as well as stamps. But they are mistaken. All such unstamped letters, if there is no identifying mark on the envelope, ultimately land in the dead letter office.

"It often happens," added the postal official, "that coins placed in envelopes for transmission work their way through the paper. In nine cases out of ten, even when the money so lost is no more than a dime, this office is notified of the occurrence by the loser, who requests that he be reimbursed."—Washington Star.

Lonely In the Gallery.

Years ago our theaters did not have the large audiences they now have, and it was a common sight to see a house of "empty benches."

"I was employed at the gallery box office of one of the theaters," says a reminiscent Philadelphian, "and one stormy evening sold but one ticket, that to a boy about thirteen years of age, who rushed up to the window and asked if I thought he could get a good seat. I replied that I thought he could. I felt sorry for the little fellow and wondered how he would feel sitting in the gallery all by himself. After the first act was over I was aroused by a tap on the window and, upon opening it, saw my solitary ticket purchaser standing there with a very sad expression on his face.

"'Mister,' he said, 'I'm the only one up there, and it's so lonesome that I am afraid to stay. Won't you give me another ticket, and I'll bring our gang around tomorrow night to help you out?'

"I took the lad to the manager and explained the situation. That boy witnessed the balance of the performance from a plush covered seat in the front row."—Philadelphia Times.

Winning a Kiss.

Aunt Hannah—I saw that young man kiss you, Jane. How did it come about?

Jane—In the most natural way in the world, auntie. He asked me if I would be offended if he kissed me, and I told him it was impossible for me to say until I knew what it was like.—Boston Transcript.

Men and Apes.

Were it not, as Huxley says, that "the ignorance of the so called educated classes is colossal," there might be need for apology in restatement of the fact that man is not descended from the ape. The relationship between them is lateral, not lineal, both being offshoots of the same stock, but each remaining, of course in very different degrees of development, isolated groups of mammals.—Edward Clodd's "Thomas Henry Huxley."

PRESIDENT'S WORDS

Claimed by Each Side of Cuban Reciprocity Controversy as Advantageous

Washington, June 14.—The president's reciprocity message gave senators a live topic of conversation yesterday, but so far as was apparent there was no change in the situation. There was a disposition on the part of the leaders on both sides of the controversy to claim, when speaking publicly, some advantage from the message. The straight reciprocity men urged that the effect would be to cause at least some of the beet sugar Republicans to abandon their opposition.

Claim of Beet Sugar Men.

The beet sugar leaders declared at the close of the day that the message had caused no loss whatever to them and that all those senators who had stood with them Thursday were still with them. They also asserted that the president's interposition in the matter had had the effect of causing to hesitate some senators who heretofore had not taken a positive stand against reduction, because of the feeling that the president should leave congress to deal with the subject in its present stage.

There was still more or less canvassing of the wisdom of holding a Republican caucus and it was probable that ultimately one will be held, but no date was mentioned.

The president's message to congress yesterday said in part:

Portion of President's Message.

"To the senate and house of representatives: I deem it important before the adjournment of the present session of congress to call attention to the following expressions in the message which in the discharge of the duty imposed upon me by the constitution, I sent to congress on the first Tuesday in December, last."

An extract from the message follows, and he also says this is but reiterating President McKinley's recommendation, in his messages of Dec. 5, 1898, and Dec 5, 1899. He then quotes from President McKinley's words. Then he says in part:

"Yesterday, June 12, I received by cable, from the American minister in Cuba, a most earnest appeal from President Palma for legislative relief before it is too late and (his) country is financially ruined.'

"The present tariff law was designed to promote the adoption of such a reciprocity treaty, and expressly provided for a reduction not to exceed 20 per cent upon goods coming from a particular country, leaving the tariff rates on the same articles unchanged as regards all other countries.

"Objection has been made to the granting of the reduction on the ground that the substantial benefit would not go to the agricultural producer of sugar, but would inure to the American sugar refiners. In my judgment provision can, and should, be made which will guarantee us against this possibility, without having recourse to a measure of doubtful policy, such as bounty in the form of a rebate.

Question of Schedules Don't Figure.

"The question as to which if any of the different schedules of the tariff ought most properly to be revised does not enter into this matter in any way or shape. We are concerned with getting a friendly reciprocal arrangement with Cuba. This arrangement applies to all the articles that Cuba grows or produces. It is not in our power to determine what these articles shall be, and any discussion of the tariff as it affects special schedules, or countries other than Cuba, is wholly aside from the subject matter to which I call your attention.

"Some of our citizens oppose the lowering of the tariff on Cuban products, just as three years ago they opposed the admission of the Hawaiian islands, lest free trade with them might ruin certain of our interests here. In the actual event their fears proved baseless as regards Hawaii, and their apprehensions as to the damage to any industry of our own because of the proposed measure of reciprocity with Cuba seem to me equally baseless. In my judgment no American industry will be hurt, and many American industries will be benefited, by the proposed action.

Should Look After Cuban Market.

"It is to our advantage as a nation that the growing Cuban market should be controlled by American producers. The events following the war with Spain and the prospective building of the isthmian canal, render it certain that we must take in the future a far greater interest than hitherto in what happens throughout the West Indies, Central America and the adjacent coasts and waters. We expect Cuba to treat us on an exceptional footing politically and we should put her on the same exceptional position economically. The proposed action is in line with the course we have pursued as regards all the islands with which we have been brought into relations of varying intimacy by the Spanish war. Porto Rico and Hawaii have been included within our tariff lines, to their great benefit as well as ours, and without any of the feared detriment to our own industries. The Philippines, which stand in a different relation, have been granted substantial tariff concessions.

"Cuba is an independent republic, but a republic which has assumed certain special obligations as regards her international position in compliance with our request. I ask for her certain special economic concessions in return; these concessions to benefit us as well as her.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"White House, June 13, 1902."

Root Issues Defense of Wood.

Secretary Root authorized yesterday the statement that General Wood's payment of three drafts for $2,880 each to F. B. Thurber for the circulation of reciprocity literature was approved by the president and the war department.

As military governor of Cuba, Secretary Root points out that General Wood had revenues for any purpose that, in his judgment, would advance the interests of the island.

It is the belief of the president and the secretary of war that the expenditures the beet sugar men now criticize were wise and justified by the situation in the island, which demanded that something be done in the interest of planters and of closer commercial relations with the United States.

Because of his position as governor, Secretary Root said that General Wood was in duty bound to administer his office for the benefit of Cuba, and to do all he conscientiously could to advance its interests.

F. B. Thurber and the Export Association acted merely as distributing agents and were employed by General Wood because they had extended mailing lists and facilities for circulating the documents.

Secretary Root said that neither he nor General Wood had any knowledge that the association was also employed by Mr. Havemeyer, of the sugar trust.

GAVE HIM HIS OWN WAY.

And Then the Customer Brought the Shoe Clerk to Time.

"Now, there," said the shoe salesman, "is just what you want."

"Is it?" asked the prospective customer. "I thought I said"—

"Just let me put it on," interrupted the salesman.

"But it is my recollection"—

"Oh!"

"Let me put on the other." Then, after a moment: "There you are, sir. Couldn't be better. Three-fifty, please."

"For what?"

"For the shoes."

"But I don't want the shoes. You asked me to let you put them on, and I was courteous enough to let you do it. I always try to be obliging. You said they were just what I wanted, but that was your judgment, and I'm accustomed to back my own. Now, if you've had all the divertisement in this matter that you desire, will you please trot me out a pair of shoes according to the plans and specifications I gave you when I came in, and perhaps we can do business? I have found by experience that the only way to get what one wants from a shoe clerk is to let him have his own way for the first fifteen or twenty minutes, and then he may become tractable."—Chicago Post.

The Real Drummer.

"The term 'drummer,'" said a traveling salesman for a Market street wholesale house, "has come to be regarded as synonymous with cheek, flashiness and dissipation. Just why this should be I don't know, unless people get the idea from stage jokes and comic papers. Perhaps years ago there was some justification for it, but there is no room for that sort of man today. Competition is too keen. The traveling salesman who stands well with his trade and with his own firm must attend strictly to business. It may sound strange and contrary to general belief, but most men in my line of work are of a religious turn. Some get into the churchgoing habit while stopping over Sunday in small towns, where there is nothing else to do. They get interested in religion and wind up by joining the church. Then, too, the country merchant is usually a man of affairs in his town and is generally a pillar of the church, and the churchgoing drummer is apt to make a greater impression on him than does one who is more worldly."—Philadelphia Record.

The Java Mangosteen.

"The most delicious of all the fruits of Java," writes a correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, "is the mangosteen. For years an enormous reward awaited the man who would bring a basket to the court of Holland, but unfortunately the fruit is too perishable, and to taste it you must go to the country where it grows.

Incased in a hard purple shell, lined with an exquisite pink gauze, are a number of snow white sections something like those of an orange, only each one growing smaller as they round the core. Each section contains one seed incased in a substance like the pulp of the grape. To describe the flavor would be impossible, but if you can imagine a perfect blending of the flavor of the grape, orange, pineapple and banana you may have a notion of the delicious flavor of the mangosteen."

Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O, Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by tem—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

Kansas Border Warfare

How Judge Lynch Broke Up Cleveland's Jayhawkers

From the beginning of the civil war until peace was declared the Kansas border from the Nebraska line to the Indian Territory was the scene of lawlessness and disorder. The demoralizing effects of civil war never found more remarkable exemplification than in the history of Cleveland's jayhawkers.

Congressman Charles F. Cochran of the St. Joseph district, who was an eyewitness of the remarkable scenes occurring in that reign of terror, tells an interesting story of the final breaking up of the gang.

"In the earlier years of the war," says Mr. Cochran, "thieves regularly organized into companies, with captains whose authority was recognized by the rank and file, with headquarters in the towns and cities of eastern Kansas, masqueraded as saviors of the Union and upon the pretense that they were serving the cause thrived amazingly by pillaging the farmhouses and barns of neighboring counties in Missouri. Atchison was the headquarters of Cleveland's gang, the most active and the boldest of the banditti.

SUBDUING A DESPERADO.

"In the capacity of saviors of the Union they took upon themselves the task of driving all persons suspected of sympathy for 'the lost cause' out of Kansas.

"Tom Ray, proprietor of an extensive blacksmithing and wagon shop, was banished. In a month or two he returned, but not until after he had halted at Winthrop, a village opposite Atchison, and opened up negotiations which resulted in a grant of permission to remain in Atchison long enough to settle up his business and collect considerable sums due from his customers. He registered at the old Massasoit House, but did not tarry long. Major R. H. Weightman, an early settler, who left Atchison in 1861 and accepted a colonel's commission in the Confederate army, had been killed at Wilson's Creek.

"While sitting in the Massasoit House barroom Ray was approached by Sandy Corbin, a somewhat notorious character, who handled most of the horses stolen by Cleveland's thieves. Corbin mentioned Weightman's death, expressed satisfaction at his untimely end and applied to the dead man all the epithets known to the vocabulary of the abandoned. Ray expostulated and finally warned Corbin to desist or expect a thrashing. Corbin rushed to his room and returned with two revolvers so adjusted upon his belt that Ray could not help seeing them. Ray, who was a giant in size, seized Corbin threw him face downward on a billiard table and with a blacksmith's hand as large as a ham spanked him until he was nearly insensible. Then he hurriedly boarded the ferryboat, crossed the river and made his way to Montana, where he lived until his death, which occurred recently.

"Cleveland's lieutenant, a fellow named Hartman, was the worst of the gang and was guilty of so many and such flagrant outrages upon prominent citizens that in sheer desperation four men, all of whom are now dead, met and drew straws to see who should kill Hartman (the last of these men died a year ago), Jesse C. Crall, during his life prominent in politics and business; George T. Challis, for thirty years a deacon in the Baptist church and a prominent wholesale merchant and identified prominently with Atchison affairs; James McEwen, a cattle buyer and butcher; the fourth man, a prominent physician.

"Each of these men had suffered intolerable outrages at the hands of Hartman. He had visited their houses and terrorized their wives. He had notified them that unless their husbands left Atchison within a specified period they would be mobbed. Even the children of two of the victims of persecution had been abused. They met at the physician's office and after a prolonged conference, at which it was agreed that neither would leave until Hartman had been killed, proceeded to draw straws to see which would undertake the work. Crall held the straws. McEwen drew the short straw, and the job fell to his lot.

"Atchison is bisected by two or three brooks, one of which traverses the northwest section of the town and runs into White Clay creek. This ravine had very precipitous banks and was crossed by several footbridges. At the east approach of one bridge was a tall elm tree. McEwen took his position under this tree and awaited the appearance of Hartman, who necessarily passed that way in going home at night. When Hartman was half way across the bridge, McEwen stepped out, dropped to his knee, leveled a double barreled shotgun and turned loose. He filled Hartman with buckshot from his head to his heels, but, strange to say, the fellow did not die for months.

"Soon afterward General Blount, then in command at Fort Leavenworth, twenty miles away, sent a company of cavalry to Atchison to deal with the gang. Just about daylight in the morning the soldiers reached Atchison. They were in the nick of time. A squad of Cleveland's thieves were crossing the river on the ice with half a dozen stolen horses. The soldiers lined up on the Kansas shore and ordered them to surrender. They made a break for liberty, and a pitched battle was fought. One of the fellows was killed, and, I think, one or two were wounded. The others were captured. Cleveland, hearing of the difficulty, mounted his horse and made for the interior of Kansas. On the way up Commercial street he came across Charley Holbert, city marshal. He placed a pistol to Holbert's head, accused him of having sent for the soldiers and marched him up the street for five or six squares. Then he whacked Holbert over the head with his gun and lit out. He was pursued to the Blue river country, 100 miles westward, and killed.

"The thieves who fell victims to Judge Lynch a few months later, while not known as members of the Cleveland gang, operated extensively throughout the period of lawlessness, in which no effort whatever was made to bring the outlaws to justice. After the Cleveland gang had been effectually broken up these predatory scoundrels continued their operations. Their last crime, and the one for which they were gibbeted, was the attempted robbery of an old man named Kelsey. They tortured the old man and his wife until they were nearly dead. The next morning hundreds of their neighbors swarmed into Atchison. The thieves got frightened and made a break for the country. They were rounded up and captured—four in all.

"Then ensued probably the most extraordinary proceeding known to the annals of Judge Lynch. The mob took possession of the jail and the courthouse and for a week held them. The prisoners were tried one by one. Sterling was convicted and executed. An elm tree standing on the banks of White Clear creek in the southwest quarter of the town was admirably suited to the purpose. When the wagon bearing Sterling to his doom reached the ground, the whole town was in attendance. A range of hills to the south was swarmed with women. Asa Barnes, a prominent farmer, a man of iron resolution and unswerving honesty, was the leader of the mob. With clinched teeth and blanched face he ordered Sterling to take his place on the seat of the wagon, and in a twinkling he was swung into eternity.

THE SHOOTING OF HARTMAN

"The next day two others, a man named Brewer, a soldier at home on a furlough, and a young fellow known as Pony, met the same fate. There was much sympathy for Pony. He was a drunkard, and all his delinquencies were attributed to this weakness. Just as they were ready to swing him up two or three members of the mob told him that if he would give information as to others implicated, but who had not been arrested, they would save him. His reply was, 'I went into this thing as a man, and I will die like a man.'

"The fourth to suffer the vengeance of the mob was an old gray haired man named Moody.

"With the death of these four scoundrels lawlessness in that region came to an end. There was not a shadow of a doubt of their guilt. Three of the men died game. Brewer, who was a coward, whimpered and begged like a puppy. His cries for mercy could be heard a square."

CHINESE TYPESETTING.

The Celestial Compositor Has to Master 11,000 Characters.

Typesetting for a Chinese paper is a vastly different matter from typesetting for a journal in another language, for there are 11,000 characters in use. When one recalls the statement of Chinese sinologues that the sayings of Confucius require 7,000 characters, this seems to be a moderate estimate. The Chinese language is derived from 214 root words, which expand into the 4,000 or 5,000 words of daily use and the thirty odd thousand of the dictionary.

It requires 11,000 spaces to hold a font of Chinese type. The large cases, or false partitions, are ranged about the room and divided into spaces for each individual type, each a word complete in itself. A Chinese printer, it is estimated, can arrange 4,000 characters a day. The work has been carefully systematized, and the characters are arranged according to their formation. A simple character designates its group, and the elaboration of form is the elaboration of its meaning, as our terminatives and prefixes elaborate the root.

A division is devoted to the simple character that stands for "wood" and all of its amplifications. In this space or column are to be found "box," "bed," "plum tree" and so on through a long list of objects pertaining to or made of wood. Should an unusual word be needed, type is cut and delicately patched to make the required character. Comparing our combinations of twenty-six letters and ten figures, besides common symbols, an idea of the labor of a Chinese compositor can be formed.—Out West.

A Pointed Suggestion.

At a recent gathering which she attended she drew from her pocket her lace handkerchief, in which a knot had been tied in order to call to her mind some trivial duty.

"Dear me," said the popular young married lady to several gallants about her, "why is that knot in my handkerchief? I tied it there to remind me of something. What could it be?"

"My child," said an old lady who overheard her and who is noted for the acrid wittiness of her repartee, "it was probably tied in order to remind you that you are married."

Queer Coronation Custom.

One of the most extraordinary gifts made on the coronation day of Edward I. was that of 500 horses, which had been used by the royal princes and other personages in the procession to Westminster abbey. These horses, all richly caparisoned and harnessed just as they were, were let loose into the very midst of the mob after the banquet in Westminster hall that always succeeded a coronation in those days. The people in the streets were permitted to catch the animals, and to him who caught a horse it and its appointments belonged.—London Chronicle.

Coins of Early Days.

The early Biblical references to pieces of silver do not in the original convey the idea of coins, but of weights, shekels. The Mosaic "oblation to God" was a half shekel, and the shekel is explained by Josephus as equal to four Athenian drachmæ of a value of about 55½ cents in American money. The first Jewish coinage under authority was, it is believed, struck by Simon the Maccabee, about the year 140 B. C. It consisted of shekels and half shekels. This coinage had its value signified upon it, "Shekel Israel," in Samaritan characters.

The proposed action is in line with the course we have pursued as regards all the islands with which we have been brought into relations of varying intimacy by the Spanish war. Porto Rico and Hawaii have been included within our tariff lines, to their great benefit as well as ours, and without any of the feared detriment to our own industries. The Philippines, which stand in a different relation, have been granted substantial tariff concessions.

"Cuba is an independent republic, but a republic which has assumed certain special obligations as regards her international position in compliance with our request. I ask for her certain special economic concessions in return; these economic concessions to benefit us as well as her.

Root Issues Defense of Wood.

Secretary Root authorized yesterday the statement that General Wood's payment of three drafts for $2,880 each to F. B. Thurber for the circulation of reciprocity literature was approved by the president and the war department.

As military governor of Cuba, Secretary Root points out that General Wood had revenues for any purpose that, in his judgment, would advance the interests of the island.

It is the belief of the president and the secretary of war that the expenditures the beet sugar men now criticize were wise and justified by the situation in the island, which demanded that something be done in the interest of planters and of closer commercial relations with the United States.

Because of his position as governor, Secretary Root said that General Wood was in duty bound to administer his office for the benefit of Cuba, and to do all he conscientiously could to advance its interests.

F. B. Thurber and the Export Association acted merely as distributing agents and were employed by General Wood because they had extended mailing lists and facilities for circulating the documents.

Secretary Root said that neither he nor General Wood had any knowledge that the association was also employed by Mr. Havemeyer, of the sugar trust.

GAVE HIM HIS OWN WAY.

And Then the Customer Brought the Shoe Clerk to Time.

"Now, there," said the shoe salesman, "is just what you want."

"Is it?" asked the prospective customer. "I thought I said"—

"Just let me put it on," interrupted the salesman.

"But it is my recollection"—

"Oh!"

"Let me put on the other." Then, after a moment: "There you are, sir. Couldn't be better. Three-fifty, please."

"For what?"

"For the shoes."

"But I don't want the shoes. You asked me to let you put them on, and I was courteous enough to let you do it. I always try to be obliging. You said they were just what I wanted, but that was your judgment, and I'm accustomed to back my own. Now, if you've had all the divertisement in this matter that you desire, will you please trot me out a pair of shoes according to the plans and specifications I gave you when I came in, and perhaps we can do business? I have found by experience that the only way to get what one wants from a shoe clerk is to let him have his own way for the first fifteen or twenty minutes, and then he may become tractable."—Chicago Post.

The Real Drummer.

"The term 'drummer,'" said a traveling salesman for a Market street wholesale house, "has come to be regarded as synonymous with cheek, flashiness and dissipation. Just why this should be I don't know, unless people get the idea from stage jokes and comic papers. Perhaps years ago there was some justification for it, but there is no room for that sort of man today. Competition is too keen. The traveling salesman who stands well with his trade and with his own firm must attend strictly to business. It may sound strange and contrary to general belief, but most men in my line of work are of a religious turn. Some get into the churchgoing habit while stopping over Sunday in small towns, where there is nothing else to do. They get interested in religion and wind up by joining the church. Then, too, the country merchant is usually a man of affairs in his town and is generally a pillar of the church, and the churchgoing drummer is apt to make a greater impression on him than does one who is more worldly."—Philadelphia Record.

The Java Mangosteen.

"The most delicious of all the fruits of Java," writes a correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, "is the mangosteen. For years an enormous reward awaited the man who would bring a basket to the court of Holland, but unfortunately the fruit is too perishable, and to taste it you must go to the country where it grows.

Incased in a hard purple shell, lined with an exquisite pink gauze, are a number of snow white sections something like those of an orange, only each one growing smaller as they round the core. Each section contains one seed incased in a substance like the pulp of the grape. To describe the flavor would be impossible, but if you can imagine a perfect blending of the flavor of the grape, orange, pineapple and banana you may have a notion of the delicious flavor of the mangosteen."

Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O, Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by tem—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

How Judge Lynch Broke Up Cleveland's Jayhawkers

From the beginning of the civil war until peace was declared the Kansas border from the Nebraska line to the Indian Territory was the scene of lawlessness and disorder. The demoralizing effects of civil war never found more remarkable exemplification than in the history of Cleveland's jayhawkers.

Congressman Charles F. Cochran of the St. Joseph district, who was an eyewitness of the remarkable scenes occurring in that reign of terror, tells an interesting story of the final breaking up of the gang.

"In the earlier years of the war," says Mr. Cochran, "thieves regularly organized into companies, with captains whose authority was recognized by the rank and file, with headquarters in the towns and cities of eastern Kansas, masqueraded as saviors of the Union and upon the pretense that they were serving the cause thrived amazingly by pillaging the farmhouses and barns of neighboring counties in Missouri. Atchison was the headquarters of Cleveland's gang, the most active and the boldest of the banditti.

SUBDUING A DESPERADO.

"In the capacity of saviors of the Union they took upon themselves the task of driving all persons suspected of sympathy for 'the lost cause' out of Kansas.

"Tom Ray, proprietor of an extensive blacksmithing and wagon shop, was banished. In a month or two he returned, but not until after he had halted at Winthrop, a village opposite Atchison, and opened up negotiations which resulted in a grant of permission to remain in Atchison long enough to settle up his business and collect considerable sums due from his customers. He registered at the old Massasoit House, but did not tarry long. Major R. H. Weightman, an early settler, who left Atchison in 1861 and accepted a colonel's commission in the Confederate army, had been killed at Wilson's Creek.

"While sitting in the Massasoit House barroom Ray was approached by Sandy Corbin, a somewhat notorious character, who handled most of the horses stolen by Cleveland's thieves. Corbin mentioned Weightman's death, expressed satisfaction at his untimely end and applied to the dead man all the epithets known to the vocabulary of the abandoned. Ray expostulated and finally warned Corbin to desist or expect a thrashing. Corbin rushed to his room and returned with two revolvers so adjusted upon his belt that Ray could not help seeing them. Ray, who was a giant in size, seized Corbin, threw him face downward on a billiard table and with a blacksmith's hand as large as a ham spanked him until he was nearly insensible. Then he hurriedly boarded the ferryboat, crossed the river and made his way to Montana, where he lived until his death, which occurred recently.

"Cleveland's lieutenant, a fellow named Hartman, was the worst of the gang and was guilty of so many and such flagrant outrages upon prominent citizens that in sheer desperation four men, all of whom are now dead, met and drew straws to see who should kill Hartman (the last of these men died a year ago). Jesse C. Crall, during his life prominent in politics and business; George T. Challis, for thirty years a deacon in the Baptist church and a prominent wholesale merchant and identified prominently with Atchison affairs; James McEwen, a cattle buyer and butcher; the fourth man, a prominent physician.

"Each of these men had suffered intolerable outrages at the hands of Hartman. He had visited their houses and terrorized their wives. He had notified them that unless their husbands left Atchison within a specified period they would be mobbed. Even the children of two of the victims of persecution had been abused. They met at the physician's office and after a prolonged conference, at which it was agreed that neither would leave until Hartman had been killed, proceeded to draw straws to see which would undertake the work. Crall held the straws. McEwen drew the short straw, and the job fell to his lot.

"Atchison is bisected by two or three brooks, one of which traverses the northwest section of the town and runs into White Clay creek. This ravine had very precipitous banks and was crossed by several footbridges. At the east approach of one bridge was a tall elm tree. McEwen took his position under this tree and awaited the appearance of Hartman, who necessarily passed that way in going home at night. When Hartman was half way across the bridge, McEwen stepped out, dropped to his knee, leveled a double barreled shotgun and turned loose. He filled Hartman with buckshot from his head to his heels, but, strange to say, the fellow did not die for months.

"Soon afterward General Blount, then in command at Fort Leavenworth, twenty miles away, sent a company of cavalry to Atchison to deal with the gang. Just about daylight in the morning the soldiers reached Atchison. They were in the nick of time. A squad of Cleveland's thieves were crossing the river on the ice with half a dozen stolen horses. The soldiers lined up on the Kansas shore and ordered them to surrender. They made a break for liberty, and a pitched battle was fought. One of the fellows was killed, and, I think, one or two were wounded. The others were captured. Cleveland, hearing of the difficulty, mounted his horse and made for the interior of Kansas. On the way up Commercial street he came across Charley Holbert, city marshal. He placed a pistol to Holbert's head, accused him of having sent for the soldiers and marched him up the street for five or six squares. Then he whacked Holbert over the head with his gun and lit out. He was pursued to the Blue river country, 100 miles westward, and killed.

"The thieves who fell victims to Judge Lynch a few months later, while not known as members of the Cleveland gang, operated extensively throughout the period of lawlessness, in which no effort whatever was made to bring the outlaws to justice. After the Cleveland gang had been effectually broken up these predatory scoundrels continued their operations. Their last crime, and the one for which they were gibbeted, was the attempted robbery of an old man named Kelsey. They tortured the old man and his wife until they were nearly dead. The next morning hundreds of their neighbors swarmed into Atchison. The thieves got frightened and made a break for the country. They were rounded up and captured—four in all.

"Then ensued probably the most extraordinary proceeding known to the annals of Judge Lynch. The mob took possession of the jail and the courthouse and for a week held them. The prisoners were tried one by one. Sterling was convicted and executed. An elm tree standing on the banks of White Clear creek in the southwest quarter of the town was admirably suited to the purpose. When the wagon bearing Sterling to his doom reached the ground, the whole town was in attendance. A range of hills to the south was swarmed with women. Asa Barnes, a prominent farmer, a man of iron resolution and unswerving honesty, was the leader of the mob. With clinched teeth and blanched face he ordered Sterling to take his place on the seat of the wagon, and in a twinkling he was swung into eternity.

"The next day two others, a man named Brewer, a soldier at home on a furlough, and a young fellow known as Pony, met the same fate. There was much sympathy for Pony. He was a drunkard, and all his delinquencies were attributed to this weakness. Just as they were ready to swing him up two or three members of the mob told him that if he would give information as to others implicated, but who had not been arrested, they would save him. His reply was, 'I went into this thing as a man, and I will die like a man.'

"The fourth to suffer the vengeance of the mob was an old gray haired man named Moody.

"With the death of these four scoundrels lawlessness in that region came to an end. There was not a shadow of a doubt of their guilt. Three of the men died game. Brewer, who was a coward, whimpered and begged like a puppy. His cries for mercy could be heard a square."

CHINESE TYPESETTING.

The Celestial Compositor Has to Master 11,000 Characters.

Typesetting for a Chinese paper is a vastly different matter from typesetting for a journal in another language, for there are 11,000 characters in use. When one recalls the statement of Chinese sinologues that the sayings of Confucius require 7,000 characters, this seems to be a moderate estimate. The Chinese language is derived from 214 root words, which expand into the 4,000 or 5,000 words of daily use and the thirty odd thousand of the dictionary.

It requires 11,000 spaces to hold a font of Chinese type. The large cases, or false partitions, are ranged about the room and divided into spaces for each individual type, each a word complete in itself. A Chinese printer, it is estimated, can arrange 4,000 characters a day. The work has been carefully systematized, and the characters are arranged according to their formation. A simple character designates its group, and the elaboration of form is the elaboration of its meaning, as our terminatives and prefixes elaborate the root.

A division is devoted to the simple character that stands for "wood" and all of its amplifications. In this space or column are to be found "box," "bed," "plum tree" and so on through a long list of objects pertaining to or made of wood. Should an unusual word be needed, type is cut and delicately patched to make the required character. Comparing our combinations of twenty-six letters and ten figures, besides common symbols, an idea of the labor of a Chinese compositor can be formed.—Out West.

A Pointed Suggestion.

At a recent gathering which she attended she drew from her pocket her lace handkerchief, in which a knot had been tied in order to call to her mind some trivial duty.

"Dear me," said the popular young married lady to several gallants about her, "why is that knot in my handkerchief? I tied it there to remind me of something. What could it be?"

"My child," said an old lady who overheard her and who is noted for the acrid wittiness of her repartee, "it was probably tied in order to remind you that you are married."

Queer Coronation Custom.

One of the most extraordinary gifts made on the coronation day of Edward I. was that of 500 horses, which had been used by the royal princes and other personages in the procession to Westminster abbey. These horses, all richly caparisoned and harnessed just as they were, were let loose into the very midst of the mob after the banquet in Westminster hall that always succeeded a coronation in those days. The people in the streets were permitted to catch the animals, and to him who caught a horse it and its appointments belonged.—London Chronicle.

Coins of Early Days.

The early Biblical references to pieces of silver do not in the original convey the idea of coins, but of weights, shekels. The Mosaic "oblation to God" was a half shekel, and the shekel is explained by Josephus as equal to four Athenian drachmæ of a value of about 55½ cents in American money. The first Jewish coinage under authority was, it is believed, struck by Simon the Maccabee, about the year 140 B. C. It consisted of shekels and half shekels. This coinage had its value signified upon it, "Shekel Israel," in Samaritan characters.

NEAR TO DEATH LIES THE VICTIM

HIS LIFE HANGS IN BALANCE

HIS CONDITION PRECARIOUS

Suffering excruciating pain from the effects of a most brutal and cowardly assault, John Greer lies in a dark and miserable looking room on Market street at the rear of what is generally known as Schlegel's fish and oyster market.

Although in this agonizing condition since last Saturday night, information pertaining to the deed and its perpetrators did not reach police headquarters until late yesterday afternoon. Why it was not reported is a mystery.

Health Officer Burgess made the discovery and under peculiar circumstances. Having been notified that from the house in which the man suffers, sickening fumes and air foul in the extreme have been coming in volumes for several days, Mr. Burgess went to make an investigation and while there found the poor unfortunate creature.

In possession of the facts as given by the officer a News Review reporter called at the uninviting apartment and the sight that met his gaze almost beggars description. There lay the man on a cot writhing in pain. With his eyes blackened and swollen nearly shut and his other features showing evidences of pain and ill usage he tried but in yain to present an appearance not warranting fears for his ultimate recovery. To the questions of the reporter he answered almost inaudibly and then only with the greatest effort.

"Why I am in this awful condition I hardly know," said he. "I don't remember it at all. Last Saturday night about 12 o'clock I was walking up Second street with Tom Boyd and two women. From then until Monday afternoon my mind was a blank. They tell me that three fellows jumped on and commenceed pounding me until they knocked me to the ground, unconscious; also that I was carried to this room by two men whose names I don't know. If the men who assaulted me were after money, they got left, because I never carry more than a dollar. I would not know the fellows, but think that I remember the spot where they jumped on me. It was terribly dark and they must have jumped on me from behind. My! but my head hurts. Please don't ask any more questions. I know that I am going to die."

One of the women that was with him at the time of the assault is now taking care of him. She talked freely, but was unable to throw any light upon the matter. She said, however, that she would know the men if they were brought before her.

The man has been under the care of two physicians and one of them stated last evening that the patient has a possible chance for recovery, but may take a sudden turn for the worse and die within a few minutes. It seems that the blood has rushed to the sufferer's head, and if it is not started in circulation the result will eventually be fatal.

Notwithstanding that the man stated positively that a policeman was present at the time of the trouble, around headquarters all knowledge of the affair is denied.

Chief Thompson is making an investigation, but has little grounds to work on, owing to the victim not being able to describe the men who made the attack.

STRONG DRINK

Strong Drink Appears to Have Unbalanced a Young Telegrapher's Mind.

Lisbon, June 14.—(Special)—H. H. Baxter, young man, was brought here from Wellsville yesterday and placed in jail. NARROW ESCAPES

George W. Ashbaugh's Residence Struck and Two Persons Shocked.

A bolt of lightning alighted in the yard of George W. Ashbaugh yesterday afternoon, and several persons had narrow escapes from death, in addition to the destruction of considerable property.

The lightning was attracted to a steel wire which was used to keep grape vines in place. The vines were torn down and some damage done to the arbors.

George McCartney was in his barn nearby and was severely shocked. It was some time before he recovered and he still feels the effects of the electricity in one of his legs.

Mrs. William McCartney, whose home is in the lot adjoining, was busy in her kitchen, and at the time the flash came had a large steel spoon in her hand. The spoon was sent flying across the room and the lady was shocked, in addition to being badly frightened.

ASK FOR PROXIES

Trenton, June 14.—In accordance with the recent decision of the directors of the Trenton Potteries company, recommending the adoption of a plan for the payment of the back dividends on the preferred stock, amounting to 44 per cent of that issue, or $550,000, the company has issued a call for proxies for the ratification of the agreement.

This provides that the accumulated preferred dividends be discharged by the issue of certificates bearing 4 per cent interest to be paid out of the current earnings of the company. Such interest, however, is not cumulative, but shall take precedence over the dividends on the preferred stock.

It is expected that the plan for refunding the back dividends will become operative July 1.

The certificates will be redeemed from current surplus or earnings, beginning January next, when $255,000 will be set aside and an equal sum each year until the issue is cancelled.

Prudence was arrested by Constable Powell and arraigned before the squire. He offered to give the Halfhill woman $25 in cash and support the child or to marry her, but she would not consent, asking $200. Being unable to make an agreement he was bound over to common pleas court under $500 bond. Sheriff Leonard escorted him to Lisbon this afternoon.

BOTH SIDES HEARD

A DENIAL IS ENTERED

That the Company Will Neither Build Nor Let Others Do So.

DANGERS ARE THE BAR

Jason H. Brookes, attorney for the East Liverpool Railway company, when interviewed by a News Review reporter today, presented the company's position regarding the Pleasant Heights extension. He said:

"The impressions that have been circulated to the effect that the East Liverpool Railway company will neither build the Pleasant Heights extension nor permit others to build it is entirely erroneous. I am authorized to say that if the Messrs. Macrum, Ashbaugh and Vodrey and the land companies in which they are interested wish to build a line from the Diamond to Pleasant Heights, the East Liverpool Railway company will place no obstruction in their way, but will facilitate and aid them in every way in its power.

"It is well known that the company already has over $5,000 invested in the bridge over Carpenter's run on Pleasant street and in the purchases which the company made continuing Pleasant street to Lisbon road. These are permanent improvements made at the expense of the company, and of which the city reaps largely the benefits, and the company is willing to make satisfactory arrangements with respect to these improvements looking to their use by whoever builds the line.

"For ourselves, our experience on Calcutta road has been quite enough and has convinced us that a road to Pleasant Heights would be an unsafe line to operate. The proposition to contribute $5,000, which these gentlemen say they are willing to make towards building the extension, is little inducement to the company. One accident on the Calcutta road has already cost, directly or indirectly, over $5,000, and there were but three passengers on that car. A runaway on the Lisbon road, with a loaded car, would cause damage enough to bankrupt the road, and the attorneys who plead so vigorously for council to compel the building of this line would be among the most ready and willing to prosecute for damages.

"It is well enough to say that the people they represent 'are willing to take the risks'; but the attorneys well know that as soon as a passenger pays his fare, the company, under the law, must practically insure his safety during the entire trip.

"The present proposition to pay $5,000, it should be understood, it not made by the Pleasant Heights Land company, with whom the original proposition was in force, but by those

ACTION WAS NOT HASTY

Those members of council who are interested in the affairs of the city to a sufficient degree to desire the enforcement of existing ordinances were surprised at the apparent indifference with which Manager L. W. Healy treated the late order coming from the council through its clerk.

Early in the month of April residents of Pleasant Heights and several thousand other citizens who had become thoroughly tired of the long delay in the construction of the Pleasant Heights extension of the East Liverpool railway started a movement with the end in view of compelling the company to build the line.

The services of two attorneys were secured, who, after going carefully over the franchise under which the company operates its entire system, had no hesitancy in giving as their legal opinion that the ordinance could be enforced.

When the management of the company became aware of the movement and what it would probably lead to it immediately instructed its attorneys to take steps which would prevent the enforcement of the ordinance as it appears upon the books of the city—as binding an obligation as was ever enacted.

At a special meeting of the council held for other purposes there appeared a representative of the street railway. No notice had been given to either the interested parties nor the council. This agent asked that council instruct its solicitor to prepare an ordinance amending the franchise so that the line intended for the accommodation of Pleasant Heights residents should end where Pleasant street joins the Lisbon road, a proposition, by the way, which would be of no benefit to those of the citizens whom this extension was intended to accommodate. The council gave the instructions pleaded for, but at the next meeting thereafter tabled the ordinance, for the very good reason that the street railway would, by its provisions, be relieved from constructing a line to a portion of the city where several hundred taxpayers had invested money with the understanding that they would have means provided for their getting to and from the city proper.

Several of the residents of the Pleasant Heights district were interviewed by a News Review reporter this morning, and not a few expressed indignation at the remarks said to have been made by Mr. Healy yesterday. Among

A meeting of the members of the Western Manufacturing Potters' association was held in the Potters' club rooms last evening, the session being the most important that has been held by the association for a year. The meeting was for the purpose of hearing the communication received by Secretary W. E. Wells from Secretary Thomas J. Duffy, of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. This communication was received by Mr. Wells early in the week, as exclusively reported in this paper at the time.

It is stated that every manufacturer in the city was represented at the session, while those from out of town were: Harry D. Wintringer, of Steubenville; Charles W. Franzheim, Wheeling; John Wick, Kittanning, Pa.; Will S. George and O. C. Walker, East Palestine; F. E. Davis and R. Heapes, of the Shenango Potteries company, New Castle, Pa.; L. K. Force, of the Summit China company, Akron.

Direct information concerning this most important meeting is absolutely withheld, as the lips of each person present are sealed as to what action was taken on the communication. However, the announcement has been made through an unofficial source that a conference committee was appointed, but the names of the members of this committee will not be presented to the public until after an answer has been forwarded by the association to the Brotherhood.

Secretary W. Edward Wells, of the association, when seen today, would not talk about the session, saying that, probably at some future time the association might have a statement to make, but there was nothing to be given out just at this time. "The manufacturers do not propose to agitate any friction," said Mr. Wells, "and for that reason we prefer to keep our business quiet."

President Joseph G. Lee could not be seen today, as he with two other manufacturers, one of whom was from out of town, were busily engaged with some detail work at the office of the association with Actuary C. E. Macrum.

COUNTY BOARD HAS TROUBLES

Excessive Valuation Is the Charge Ppt Forward By Taxpayers.

Lisbon, June 14.—(Special)—The county board of equalization is having unusual trouble to adjust the property values in the county. About 100 claims of excessive valuation have already been received. Many of these appear valid. It is very difficult to adjust them as the total valuation can not be changed and when the estimate on one property is lowered that on another must be raised.

Ten days' notice is given and the property owners have a chance to appear before the board and protest. The board say that they are never troubled urging anyone to come on this errand.

One Is Rendered Unconscious and Receives Severe Injuries

Salem, June 14.—(Special)—Mrs. W. A. Tetlow and niece, Miss Leona Gaunt, narrowly escaped a most horrible death this morning. They had driven up Depot street to the railroad track where they were compelled to stop, an excursion train blocking the road. After waiting a few minutes this train pulled out and Mrs. Tetlow gave the horse a cut with a whip, starting the animal across the track. When but fairly started both the occupants were horrified at seeing the Limited express charging at them at an awful rate of speed.

It was then to late to turn back and the horse was given another lash. He resonded by a heroic jump and cleared the track, but, however, not without injury to the women. The front of the engine struck the rear wheels of the buggy, turning it over and over a dozen times. Friends rushed to their rescue and found Miss Gaunt not badly hurt but Mrs. Tetlow in an unconscious condition. Medical aid soon revived her and it is now thought, although her injuries are very painful, that she was not fatally hurt.

BIG PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED

Rev. W. H. Gladden Gives Methodist Protestants Something to Think About.

Ministers Who Have to Teach School to Add to Scanty Salaries.

A $1,000 CHURCH FOR $10

Pittsburg, June 14.—The spectacle of two pastors so poorly paid that they are compelled to teach in the public schools to make a living, the offer to sell a church that cost $1,000 for $10, and the prospect of losing three or four congregations to the Methodist Episcopal church are a few of the interesting features that are promised at the coming annual session of the M. P. conference at Knoxville.

This stratling state of affairs is being brought to the attention of the conference through a letter just issued by Rev. W. H. Gladden, of East Liverpool, who is the conference president. The letter on next Monday morning will come up for consideration at the preachers' meeting in the Methodist Protestant building, Fifth avenue. Reorganization and the consolidation of perhaps a dozen of the weaker churches throughout the conference will be among the most serious questions to be considered at the Knoxville meeting. Mr. Gladden says in his letter:

"At Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, two charges but four miles apart, we have the spectacle of both pastors spending six hours a day in the school room for a large part of the year, to supplement their meager support—$400 or $500 each a year—with the wages of the school teacher, that they may get a living. Two pastors employed in this questionable manner, while other charges are entirely without pastoral supply, the laborers being so few.

"Now, it seems to me that if these two charges, Bakerstown and Mt. Olive, which are but four miles apart, could be consolidated, a comfortable support could be given to one man for all his time, which I think would be much more effective than, say, half time from both."

Mr. Gladden continues in his letter: "In Washington sub-district, in the western part of Greene county, we have four churches, Fairview, Mt. Zion, Bethel and Pleasant Hill, and an interest in a union church at Long Run, none of which has had a regular pastor for several years. We are in danger of losing several of these appointments, where we have thousands of dollars worth of property and a hundred members, at least, to the West Virginia conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. Overtures are now being made, and listened to by many, with this end in view.

"One sale has actually been attempted, that of the Pleasant Hill church for $10, which cost us $1,000. These people have been told that we have abandoned them; many believe it, and I confess it looks very much like it; but a little while longer and all our interests in that community will be lost. On the Waynesburg and Morrisville charge attention is also needed.

"I would suggest that Rev. R. B. Whitehead, pastor of Monongahela circuit, call a conference of all the pastors in this district, and at least one delegate from each society, to take take these matters into consideration and formulate propositions for the consideration of the fourth quarterly conference of this district, looking to a readjustment of our shattered boundaries.

"In the Connellsville sub-district similar conditions obtain. Fairchance and Monroe circuit is at this time dissolving, happily through its own prosperity. The Cool Spring church, an appointment now attached to East End, Uniontown, might be cared for in the readjustment of the old Fairchance and Monroe circuit. I would like to ask Rev. George W. Morris, of Connellsville, to call a convention like those I have already suggested. In the New Brighton sub-district, Trumbull circuit and Turnersville need similar attention, neither of them being able to support a pastor."

Mr. Gladden's letter has occasioned great surprise throughout the conference, and it is more than probable that the changes the president has suggested will be made without hesitation.

EAST END

CAR LINE IMPROVEMENTS

Mean That the Company Intends to Operate More Cars During the Summer.

The East Liverpool Railway company this morning put a large force of men at work constructing a new switch at Laughlin No. 1. The switch is located at the West End plant, and as soon as it is completed the company will locate another switch near the McIntosh residence on Ohio avenue, just east of the trestle. The third switch, will be at Columbian park, work will be pushed on these improvements as fast as possible in order that more cars can be operated on the road commencing the first of the month.

The new turntable ordered by the company several weeks ago and which will be located at the eastern terminus of the road has arrived in the city and this will be placed in position at once. As soon as this is done the company will place several summer cars on the road, but under the present condition of the road they can not be operated, as the company has only cars with stationary seats.

The annual meeting of the trustees of the Neville Institute of the East End was held a few days ago, but there was not much business for the officers to transact. The most important matter attended to was that of electing a teacher for the new school term, and this position was given to Mr. Fisher, at a salary of $45 a month. He has had the school for the past two terms and has proved himself to be a capable instructor.

No improvements will be made about the building this summer, as several hundred dollars were spent last year for new furniture and other matters. The school will be opened in September, and will have an enrollment of not less than 50 scholars.

AN OIL SHED BURNED

Fire in Calhoun's Addition That Came Near Resulting Seriously.

A fire that might have resulted more seriously than it did occurred yesterday afternoon at the residence of Michael Silwell in Calhoun's addition. Mr. Stilwell was in a small outbuilding for boiling linseed oil, which is used by the pottery printers, and the intense heat set fire to the oil. The small building was practically destroyed, and the flames commenced to consume the coal house, and later the fence, leading to the house, caught fire. Several men in the vicinity of the fire saw the flames, and procuring tubs, carried sufficient water to extinguish to flames.

The fence was knocked down, and this prevented the flames from touching the residence. Mr. Stilwell was severely burned about the hands.

Big Fair Arranged For.

Information has been received in the East End that all matters pertaining to the Tri-State Fair, which is to be held at Columbian park in October, have been arranged, and the work of preparing the park for this event will commence shortly. Entry blanks for the races will be issued within a few days. The fair will last for four days while the races may be continued for six days. Quite a number of persons from the city and the East End are interested in this event.

Epworth Leaguers Return.

Miss Nellie Carman and Miss Pearl Finley, representing the Epworth League of the Erie Street M. E. church, returned to the East End last evening from Toronto where they attended the district convention of the league. Miss Leland Smith and Miss Mabel Flick, delegates to the convention from the Junior League, have also returned.

Stolen Horse Recovered.

The horse belonging to Larkins & Ferguson, which was stolen from the Waggle farm a few days ago, was returned to the East End last evening. The horse was located just south of Lisbon. A rigid investigation is now being made to find the thieves who took the horse from the farm.

ANIMAL IMITATIVENESS.

How a Beggar's Dog Grows to Be Like His Master.

"One of the most curious traits to be found in the animal nature," said an observant citizen, "is that which grows out of the unconscious imitativeness of creatures of the lower order. I have observed many instances of where the creatures of a lower order have taken on the characteristics in some noticeable degree of members of the human family. One might know, for instance, the beggar's dog from the look of the dog, from the droop of the eye, the pathetic hang of the lip and a certain general air of despondency and hopelessness which seems to speak in the very nature of the animal. I mention the beggar's dog because it is a familiar example. The beggar's dog never looks cheerful, never smiles, never frolics, but simply sits by his master and broods and begs for whatever charity may give.

"I have seen the dog character molded under happier influences, and the dog became more cheerful. He was a light hearted, free and easy sort of creature and seemed to get something of the sunnier side of things. I am almost tempted to say that if you will show me a man's dog I will tell you what manner of man the owner is, with particular reference to temperament and his moods. The melancholy man, the man who grovels mentally along the gloomier groves, the pessimistic man who is always looking at the dark side of the picture, all the men who come within these unhappy classifications rarely own a cheerful dog. The dog unconsciously takes to the ways of the master and in his moods imitates the master's way of thinking.

"But turn to the dog of the jolly, cheerful fellow. Watch him show his teeth in laughter when the master approaches. He is darting across the yard and dancing and frisking around the master's feet in the happiest way imaginable, and he is up to all kinds of pranks and does all kinds of little things to indicate the good nature that is in him. He does as his master does and seems to take the same general view of life. These are small things, I guess, but they show just how important one's way of thinking may influence one's dog and change his whole view of life."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Good Memory.

When Theodore Roosevelt was governor of New York, he was a great friend of the porters and employees of the New York Central. One morning he took the 9:15 train from Albany west, and as he entered the car he said to Adams, the colored porter: "Hello, porter! You here still?"

"Yes, sir," replied the porter, "and I'm going to stay here till you get to be president, and then I want you to give me a job."

"I'll go you!" promptly replied the governor, and, sure enough, when Governor Roosevelt became president of the United States he surprised Adams by sending for him to go to work in Washington.—Schoolmaster.

ART OF CARICATURE

The story is told of an abbe of the seventeenth century who was as deformed in figure as he was ridiculous in dress, and as sensitive about his physical deformity as he was vain of his eccentric attire, that while serving mass one morning he observed a smile of contempt on the face of one of the courtiers present and determined to avenge himself by serving a process upon him for appearance in court the following day.

The offender, M. de Lasson by name, knowing that things would go hard with him unless he could show some reason for his mirth, made a hasty sketch of the hunchback abbe, exaggerating in size the six black caps and the waistcoats in which he was wont to appear, and when he was solemnly asked to show cause for his unseemly mirth and indignity to the holy church he suddenly displayed before his judges the caricature of the abbe as his "excuse." The likeness was so excellent and the cartoon so grotesque that the entire court fell to laughing, and the accused was liberated without a reprimand.

This is the first authentic case of the power of the cartoon in a hall of justice, but it illustrates the power of the pencil in depicting the follies of the foolish and the affectations of the artificial.

There is no telling when the art of caricature began. There are a number of grotesques that have come down to us from earliest Egyptian times. The Greeks employed pictures to emphasize their satire, and so did the Romans. All through the middle ages there were numberless examples of "grotesqueries" which, curiously enough, were used in enforcing the doctrines of the church by means of satirizing the devil. But the eighteenth century was the heyday of the cartoon.

Beginning in France and overrunning into Holland and thence across the channel into England, the flood of caricaturists carried everything before it, and it is safe to say that we read the history of the times with clearer vision and with more accuracy of detail for the mirror which caricaturists held up to reflect the striking peculiarities of the men and events passing before it.

Gautier mentions a Spanish cartoonist, Francisco Gaya y Lucientes, a mixture of Rembrandt, Watteau and Rabelais, who preceded the two great caricaturists of the latter half of the eighteenth century, George Cruikshank in England and M. Charlet in France. Charlet is known as the father of modern social caricature and holds as good title to his position as does Philipau to that of the father of comic journalism, with Le Charivari, the strongest paper of its kind. Then came Punch in England, which still retains its subtitle of the London Charivari, for years the faithful if not the most highly polished reflecter of British life. Upon its staff John Leech, Richard Doyle, John Fenniel, George du Maurier and a dozen men of lesser name kept Great Britain in good humor for two generations.

It has been reserved for America, however, to bring forth a new race of caricaturists, which for lack of a better title may be called the personal cartoonists, men who seize upon the characteristics of an individual and so exaggerate them that the subjects of the cartoons are known by the most prominent features in their physical, mental or moral makeup.

True there was one man in London a hundred years ago, Gillray by name, who had this faculty of dissecting his subject until he found his weakest point and then unmercifully pricking it with his drawing pencil, but with him the race died out, to be reincarnated in America. Gillray was a close observer of people and events. He would sit in his publisher's window and watch the fops of the court as they passed and fasten in his memory every feature by which a man would be recognized by his acquaintances. He remembered every story that related to the traits of character of those in the public eye, and the St. James street of 1800 is faithfully reproduced in his art.

Perhaps we Americans look at the droll side of life more than other people, but certain it is we have more and better cartoonists than elsewhere. The very quickness with which we see the point of a joke demands equal facility in portraying drollery in a cartoon. We sketch boldly and leave much of the unnecessary detail to our slower cousins. Then, too, our public events happen with such startling rapidity that a cartoon of yesterday's doings would be flat today, and we must keep very much alive and be ready for a political change overnight.

In other words, the alert American must have depicted in his cartoon the very traits of character that have made him what he is, the quickest and brightest of men.—Thomas Nast in New York News.

Evidence abounds that the Boers so lately in arms against Great Britain are accepting peace terms in good faith and manifesting an eagerness to get back to their old homes and begin the work of repairing war's waste as soon as possible. The outlook for the British is thus rendered bright. So long as both sides to the peace are anxious to carry out the agreement the work of reconstruction ought to be comparatively easy. Boers and British will have to live together in the Transvaal, and the more friendly the races remain with each other the better it will be for both of them. The chances are that a good deal of progress will be made by the end of the present year in removing the evidences of the war. One of the first effects of the peace will be a reopening of the mines and an increase in the gold output of that rich field.

That big total for the two Republican candidates for Congress in the recent election in Oregon is going to detract from the interest of the congressional canvass throughout the country this year. The Democrats now see that their chances for victory are hopeless, and they will not make such a fight as they threatened before that canvass to do. As Oregon went on the national expansion question, which will be the great issue in the canvass throughout the country, so will go the nation. This beats the Democracy for the 1902 canvass at least.

If, as is asserted, there are 100,000 children in the Indian territory, growing up without the benefit of the public schools, the matter is one which should receive the immediate attention of the government. To neglect the schools is to cultivate ignorance and pile up trouble for the future. There is no principle better established than that education pays, even when considered solely as a pecuniary investment. Abundant school houses lessen the necesity for jails, workhouses and almshouses.

President Roosevelt is right. The reasons for granting commercial reciprocity to Cuba far outweigh the reasons for making similar concessions to any other government. In looking after Cuba's welfare, this nation has accepted a solemn trust. That country apparently needs our aid as much as ever. The president says no American industry will be injured by extending such aid and makes a strong plea that it shall no longer be withheld.

Cubia's first minister to the United States will soon reach his post in Washington. He is by no means a stranger, having been educated in an American college, and having been prominent here as the agent of Cuban patriots during the Spanish-American war. He is as much American as he is Cuban in spirit and sentiment, and an excellent and capabel man who will doubtless serve his government well.

There are now 200,000 children attending school in Cuba, and schools are being muitiplied. The majority of them had no schooling whatever until the United States planted its school system on the island. Of all the blessings this government has conferred on Cuba, free schools will undoubtedly prove the greatest.

Congressman Hepburn, who was born in Ohio, has been nominated for congress in the Eighth Iowa district for the ninth consecutive time. Those who would succeed in political life ought to be careful about the selection of a birthplace.

ARRESTED AT ALLIANCE

In an Alliance paper yesterday appeared the following: "William Nice was arrested last night by Officer Votaw of the railroad police. He was riding on a freight train, west bound for Chicago. He was a veritable arsenal, and had on his person two revolvers, every chamber of which was loaded, a razor and knife. Two complaints were filed against him, trespassing and carrying concealed weapons.

"At a hearing this morning he stated he was a shoemaker from East Liverpool and had started for Chicago, got as far as Massillon when his money ran low, and he took a freight train for Alliance. His story was not a very plausible one and he could give no reason for having the revolvers on his person. Mayor Walker gave him $10 and costs for trespassing and $25 and costs and 10 days in the workhouse for carrying concealed weapons.

While the fact may seem rather peculiar it is nevertheless true that an order for no less than four carloads of ware was placed in this city yesterday for shipment to Trenton, the center of the pottery district of the east. One firm received two cars of this order, while the other two cars were divided among as many firms. The ware in this order is all decorated and is for delivery just as soon as it can be made. Such conditions do not prevail in the sister pottery city in the east, and it has been years since an order has been placed with a Trenton pottery firm for shipment to this city.

Considerable has been heared within the past few weeks relative to the "shut down," but yesterday few if any of the manufacturers could tell when their plants would close. It was stated by a representative of the C. C. Thompson Pottery company that that plant would shut down on the evening of July 3, but how long it would remain so could not be told. This shut down will be governed entirely by conditions that prevail at that time. If business warrants a closing of the shops they will be closed, but if the ware is needed by the jobbers it will have to be made.

While drilling for oil on the McGaffick farm in Hancock county forty feet of clay was discovered yesterday. The clay has been found to be an excellent quality, and some will be brought to this city where it will be given a thorough test. A 40 foot vein of clay is quiet a large one, and if it is found to be of use, it can be easily marketed in this district. It is also said that just above the clay a vein of coal from four to 16 feet was touched. It seems that the wealth of Hancock county remains to be told as discoveries are being made there frequently.

The American Cereal Company is about to place an order with a local firm for 4,000 pieces for "something new." It is just a new scheme with that firm, but not with the manufacturer to whom the order will be given. The scheme is nothing more or less than a cup and saucer with the name of the special article with which it is to be given away painted on the cup and around the edge of the saucer. The present order will be greatly increased during the fall and all of it will be made by a local firm which has secured the contract.

The price-list committee of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, now in session in the Ribsam building at Trenton, devoted Thursday morning's session to the examination of statistical reports of the trade. The work of coupling the price lists was reached yesterday. The conference with the sanitary manufacturers is slated for Monday.

Commencing next week, Warehousemen's local No. 48 will meet in the Knights of Columbus hall on Friday evenings, instead of in the Oyster block on Sixth street, as has been the custom in the past. The third floor of the Sixth street building is to be remodeled, and on this account the local had to secure other quarters.

M. Chalfant, of Philadelphia, who is visiting friends in this city, visited of one of the hill potteries yesterday afternoon. It has been 40 years since Mr. Chalfant visited a pottery to see the "inside workings," and he stated that the changes that have been made in the industry within that time were wonderful.

Harry E. Bicknell, of Trenton, who has been in this city for several days on business, returned to his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bicknell was formerly connected with an assortment company of this city, and has been out of the city but a few months.

The New Castle Pottery company is having several new shapes made in this city which it expects to have ready for the market in the next two months. A dinner and toilet shape are being made for this firm, and both are exceedingly catchy designs.

George Wolf, for several years connected with the Peoria potteries, has resigned his position there and is now associated with the Shenango pottery at New Castle. Mr. Wolf has always made a success of the pottery trade where others have failed.

A. T. Otis, representing Pitts, Kimball & Co., of Boston, who has been in the city several days placing some very large orders, has returned to his home. Some very substantial business was placed by Mr. Otis.

Will S. George, of the East Palestine Pottery company, who was in the city last evening, stated that business with his company was rather good and practically all departments were being run full.

Kilndrawers' local No. 17 will meet in Brotherhood hall this evening when officers for the new term will be elected. Some other important business will also be considered at this session.

During the absence of Henry Noficer, of Chester, bench boss at the East Liverpool pottery, his duties will be looked after by George Smith, who is now located at the Brunt plant.

Frank Fowler, foreman of the decorating department at the Oliver plant, Sebring, and Miss Viola Evans, daughter of John Evans, of Beloit, were married Thursday.

The expected pottery game at Sebring last Wednesday between the two teams composed of pottery employes of that town did not take place on account of rain.

Mr. Hughes, a well known decalcomania salesman, who has been absent from the city for several days, has returned.

It is said the new local that is to be formed at Zanesville will be given the number of local union 39.

SOUTH SIDE

TO PAVE 14 FEET

The East Liverpool & Rock Springs street railway has now offered to furnish the material and do the work of paving a width of 14 feet of the streets along the line of route of the street railway line from the Ohio river bridge. With this big assistance and taking into consideration the fact that the property owners along each side of the streets will pay their regular one-third, the expense to the town for paving the streets will be small.

A number of the citizens have expressed themselves already in favor of it and the majority of the town's population hopes that the ordinance will be passed by council at their next meeting on next Thursday evening.

New Track Is Ready.

The East Liverpool and Rock Springs street railway will have its new double track ready this evening between the Ohio river bridge and the park for Sunday traffic. This statement was made this morning by an employe of the road. The track has already been laid the entire distance and all that remains to be done is the connection with the main track.

HARDEST WORK AHEAD

Equalization Board Still Has a Big Task to Accomplish.

Although the members of the board of equalization have been at work for several weeks, their work is by no means near an end. In fact some of the hardest of their duties are yet to come, and so far the members claim they have received no assistance from County Auditor Adams. He is to be asked to come to the city, said a member of the board this morning, but whether the invitation will be accepted cannot be told. The board has completed the work of going over the personal property of five wards and three wards of structures have been looked after. There are yet two wards of this sort of work to be done, and that will be followed by the board surveying the factories. This will no doubt prove one of the most tedious tasks, as the board, it is intimated, will try to keep the figures down as much as possible.

A member of the board said: "I cannot see why the county auditor does not come to East Liverpool as other auditors have done. Why, I remember when former auditors brought their families to the city to spend a few days. Adams should come to this city now, if never again, as his presence is needed."

JOYOUS REUNION

BETWEEN EX-CONFEDERATE OFFICER AND EX-SLAVE.

Colonel R. H. P. Staub, of Martinsburg, W. Va., is in the city on a mission differing somewhat from that of the usual run of visitors. He came last evening, and with but one object in view, that he might have the pleasure of meeting a friend of his boyhoood days, whom he had not seen for forty years.

This friend is Mrs. Sallie Sheets, janitress of the Carnegie public library. Mrs. Millie Kilmore, mother of Mrs. Sheets, was a slave and belonged to Colonel Staub's mother. It was under these circumstances that the colonel and Mrs. Sheets met when children. They played togther and were great friends.

In 1862 Mr. Staub, then 29 years of age, enlisted in the rebel army as a colonel under General Jackson. When the war was over he returned home, but things were then much changed. The slaves had all deserted the southern homestead and Sallie with them. From the day he enlisted until last evening Colonel Staub had not seen Mrs. Sheets. Their meeting at the library was a most touching one. Reminiscences of their happy days were recalled and the scene presented was a grand one.

While in the city Colonel Staub will be the guest of Dr. George P. Ikirt and family.

The police are on the lookout for Roy Adams, a young man well known in this city, who, it is alleged, made a daring theft in Chester yesterday morning. He is in the employ of Mrs. Madden, proprietress of a restaurant located opposite Rock Springs park, and she states that while she was out on an errand Adams tapped the till for a sum of money ranging from $15 to $25.

Word reached the police last evening that Adams is in hiding in the city and they are keeping a close watch for him.

The young man had boarded at the restaurant ever since he first came to Chester several weeks ago. At that time he held a good position in the Chester tin mill which he later lost for some unknown reason. Since that time, having told of his mother being dead and not knowing where his father was, one of the sons through sympathy, allowed him to remain and board with them by his helping around the restaurant until he might find another job.

When there was no one in the front part of the restaurant but himself yesterday, it is claimed, he took the opportunity offered to tap the till. The theft was not noticed nor was Adams missed for nearly a half hour, after which Mr. Madden and other boarders started in search of him, but learned that he had crossed the bridge. They came over to East Liverpool, but could find nothing of the young miscreant who had made good his escape. He has not been heard of since.

who have purchased the Fisher farms and other lands even farther out, and have laid out the same in lots, and are speculating on increases in value of the same. It is not a question of cutting in two the values of the people who have already built homes, as naively suggested by the attorney at the meeting of council the other night, but rather of doubling and trebling the value of the holdings of the interested gentlemen who are making these demands. The people will not be, and council should not be, misled by such sophistries.

"We do not think the citizens generally desire or demand the building of this line, and if the company is required to build it by the command of the city council, the city will be morally, if not indeed legally, responsible for any accidents that may result. In the opinion of some very good lawyers whom I have consulted, a legal responsibility will rest upon the city if damages are incurred.

"It has been said that the company does not use proper safety appliances. Such a statement is untrue and most unreasonable. The very best modern wheel brakes, track brakes and motors are used on the Calcutta road, but cars occasionally run away there in spite of all these precautions. One reason is that we are obliged by the ordinances under which we operate to use a girder or flat rail on all paved streets; this rail is level with or below the surface of the street and collects all the dirt, slime and ice of the highway.

"Then again we are obliged by the ordinance to lay the rails so as to conform exactly to the surface of the street, and must, of course, follow the angles of the street. The dangers imposed by this requirement are illustrated at the scene of the Calcutta road accident. If a T rail, such as is used on steam and suburban roads, could have been used there, and if the city ordinance would have permitted the company to raise the outer rail above the street level at that point, these accidents might have been prevented. But for obvious reasons the city could not permit this to be done.

"Similar conditions confront the company on the Lisbon road and on the several streets in Pleasant Heights, save only that there is no convenient Wucherer house at the turn of the hill above the West End school house in which to lodge runaway cars. If a car ever gets away and is derailed at that point, no one can calculate the loss of life. We think council should consider these things, as well as the carefully prepared arguments of attorneys whose clients, interested in selling their land holdings, 'are willing to take the risk.'

"The amended ordinance granting the franchises to the East Liverpool Railway company and extending its franchise, contains many concessions to the citizens of East Liverpoool, which are of intrinsic value and which they prize more highly than they do the building of this dangerous spur. If council annuls the present ordinance the company, of course, must fall back on the original ordinance with its limitations, both as to the city and itself.

"Before attempting anything of this kind, involving, as it does, so much of importance to all concerned, we trust the council will consider all the things the city and its inhabitants might lose by the annuling of the later franchise, as well as the unceftain benefits that the gentlemen who are insisting upon the building of this road might have to gain. We trust the council will appoint a committee to take up this matter and meet with the representatives from Pleasant Heights and the representatives of the railway company, for the purpose of developing the situation fully and arriving, if possible, at some conclusion mutually satisfactory.

"If the gentlemen are sincere about wanting to build this line, I repeat, the company will place nothing in their way, but will aid them in every way possible."

Explanations Which Will Help You to Understand Them.

The rude drawings hardly need a key. When on some white gatepost I found the sketch of a gun, I stole farther down the road. I had a strong objection so early in my career to being riddled full of holes by some intrepid farmer. The outline of a dog of warlike proportions, with wild eyes and ferocious teeth, was wont to make me go breakfastless. My summer wardrobe was not in condition to allow of further mutilation. If I felt brave enough to kick a yelping cur, I sauntered in recklessly at the gate which bore a portrait of a toy dog. Once past him one could usually get a bite.

A big round "O" did not make one wild to approach the premises it adorned. It generally portrayed a hostess with a nature of adamant. A single "X" stood for a cross saw, which with small manipulation might earn a meal. Two X's made a tramp of none too vigorous a makeup go farther down the road. It suggested considerable wood cutting in exchange for a meal.

The sign every tramp looks for anxiously is a crudely drawn table, with a lopsided coffee cup and a plate upon it. Beyond that gatepost dwells a sweet, simple, motherly soul who will welcome the most dilapidated hobo into her spotless kitchen and set before him a good square meal. She may sit beside him, inquiring as to the safety of his soul, and she may give him a mother's gentle advice or she may have a story to tell tearfully of a wayward boy lost somewhere in the great world, and all the fee she asks for her gracious hospitality is a simple request that in the wanderings of her guest he may look about for her absent boy and give him a loving message of a mother's longing and watching.—Good Housekeeping.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

The meeting of Calhoun Association No. 41, Stationary Engineers, held Wednesday evening, was one of the most interesting sessions held for some time. The association has formulated a small lecture course, and a lecture by some member or visitor is given upon the second and fourth Wednesday evenings of the month. Mr. Conley, an engineer at the Taylor, Smith & Taylor, who has been elected a delegate from the association to the annual state convention which will meet at Newark June 19-20, will leave for the convention next Wednesday evening.

DEPUTIES NOT TOLD

ACTED OF THEIR OWN ACCORD

Charleston, W. Va. June 14.—Captain J. K. Thompson, United States marshal disclaims any responsibility for the presence of his deputies at Collins Colliery company's mine at Glen Jean, and says if they are there it is as private citizens and upon their own responsibility. He has written them they do not represent his department. The operators, it is said, asked Thompson to enforce the injunction issued in 1897, but he declined. It applies to five or six collieries and is directed to Fred Dilcher, Eugene Debs, Chris Evans and several others and their "associates, confederates, agents and promoters." Evans is the only one mentioned that is here now. He is making no effort to violate the order. It is the general opinion here that the injunction issued in 1897 is not operative in this instance.

The Mile Branch company has made concessions, reducting the price of powder, allowing a nine-hour day and pay every two weeks. The men voted yesterday to return to work. The granting of concessions by the Hocking Valley and Mile Branch operators, it is believed, will put a new phase on the strike in that section. It is the first break of the operators to get their men to return to work, and other operators will probably follow their example.

Strikers Were Steadily Losing Ground

Bluefield, W. Va., June 14.—In the Flat Top region the striking miners were steadily losing ground yesterday and the operators predicted that within a week the strike will be a thing of the past. A large percentage of the men returned to work yesterday and the loading throughout the field was almost double that of Thursday. In the Tug River district it was different. But little coal was delivered there yesterday. The output of this district is small, compared with the Elkhorn or Flat Top regions proper. The march of the strikers through the field yesterday amounted to comparatively nothing. There was only a small number of men in line, possibly not over a hundred in all, and their walk was ineffectual. No disturbances have been recorded so disturbances had been recorded so far last night.

CUT OFF FOOD OF HELPLESS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The work of the strikers in attempting to bring out all men who are still in the employ of the coal companies went steadily on. Their campaigns against the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was nearly over last night, most of these men being out, and the union was paying more attention to the fire bosses, clerks and others who had taken the places of those who quit. Pressure was being brought to bear on them in every possible way. Quite a number of the fire bosses throughout the region have already stopped work because they had been asked to take the strikers' places, and at a meeting held here yesterday afternoon about a dozen more consented to join the strikers.

The officials of the coal companies in this region are complaining of what they call "secret intimidation" of the families of workmen who have remained loyal to the employers, threatening to boycott merchants who sell to the families of men who are working, most of the men being kept at the collieries, while their families are at home. One official said in part:

Appeals From Unprotected Families.

"Every day we get appeals from these families and in every instance the company takes it upon itself to see that they shall not hereafter be cut off from their daily supply of the necessities of life."

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

Irrigation Bill Through Congress.

Washington, June 14.—The house yesterday passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee, was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill already has passed the senate.

LARKINS, THE DRUG MAN

FOOLED HIS SUPERIOR.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met upon the street a lieutenant who had bearded the pasha and disregarded his orders. "To what regiment do you belong?" demanded the indignant minister. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The young man obeyed, and the twain rode along gloomily enough for some time, when the pasha stopped his carriage and entered an office where he would be detained for some time on business. Seizing the opportunity, the culprit sprang from the vehicle, darted into a neighboring barber's stall and regained his post before the return of his jailer minus his beard. For the remainder of the route the officer buried his face in his hands and seemed the picture of apprehension.

Abasseuh was reached at last, and all the officers were assembled to witness the degradation of their comrade, who all the while kept well in the rear of his chief. "Come forward, you son of a dog!" cried the irate pasha, when there stepped before him an officer with a face as clean as a baby's and a look of the most supreme innocence. His excellency gave one look of blank astonishment and then, with an appreciative smile breaking over his war worn features, turned to the assembled officers and said, "Here, gentlemen, your old minister is a fool, and your young lieutenant is a captain."

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live In the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as gigantic.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitants.—International Monthly.

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

The Toiler and His Home

HOME SURROUNDINGS OF OUR TOILERS SHOULD NOT BE SO DEGRADED AS TO DEGRADE CITIZENSHIP. YOU CAN'T MAKE A MAN LIVE LIKE A PIG AND EXPECT HIM TO VOTE LIKE A MAN. IT ISN'T IN HIM. A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent, Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her: "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

Clerical Customer—It was certainly very kind of you not to awaken me. The rest has done me good, and I am very thankful to you for what was really a very refreshing sleep.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended your church last Sunday.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge. It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

AT OAK GROVE PARK

Several Citizens Have Already Taken Up Summer Residence There.

Mrs. R. L. Herbert and family have moved to Oak Grove park, better known as the Spring Grove Company Grounds. Among those with their families from this city who are now living there are: W. W. Weaver, J. E. Brookes, Rev. J. G. Rhineartz, C. C. Ashbaugh and Joseph Chetwyn. Next week several more families will move out and it is said that the usual contingent from Wellsville will be at the camp in a few days.

The park is more beautiful this year than ever before, having been improved very much and an exceedingly pleasant summer is anticipated by all.

POLICE BALL TEAM

The Cops Have Organized and Are Ready to Play Against Anybody.

From the city hall springs a challenge very wide in its scope. The police have organized a baseball team and they challenge the East End fire station team, the clerks, the newspaper men, the Phoenix club, the Carroll club and Capt. Walsh's men. It is not likely that the challenge will be accepted, as none of the teams in the list will play a team that has not a reputation.

HIGH PRICE FOR WOOL

A Rate One Cent Higher Than Last Year Being Paid in Columbiana County.

The farmers of this county are receiving a higher price for their wool than has been paid for several years. The ruling price for best grade, 23 cents for washed, and 17 cents for unwashed, is one cent higher than the top reached last year. This seems to encourage some to hold, but the prospect for a raise is not promising.

It is usually good business policy to let go at market prices when the product is ready. Several old clips have been sold for which 28 and 25 cents was refused two and three years ago.

DEPUTIES NOT TOLD

ACTED OF THEIR OWN ACCORD

Charleston, W. Va. June 14.—Captain J. K. Thompson, United States marshal disclaims any responsibility for the presence of his deputies at Collins Colliery company's mine at Glen Jean, and says if they are there it is as private citizens and upon their own responsibility. He has written them they do not represent his department. The operators, it is said, asked Thompson to enforce the injunction issued in 1897, but he declined. It applies to five or six collieries and is directed to Fred Dilcher, Eugene Debs, Chris Evans and several others and their "associates, confederates, agents and promoters." Evans is the only one mentioned that is here now. He is making no effort to violate the order. It is the general opinion here that the injunction issued in 1897 is not operative in this instance.

The Mile Branch company has made concessions, reducting the price of powder, allowing a nine-hour day and pay every two weeks. The men voted yesterday to return to work. The granting of concessions by the Hocking Valley and Mile Branch operators, it is believed, will put a new phase on the strike in that section. It is the first break of the operators to get their men to return to work, and other operators will probably follow their example.

Strikers Were Steadily Losing Ground

Bluefield, W. Va., June 14.—In the Flat Top region the striking miners were steadily losing ground yesterday and the operators predicted that within a week the strike will be a thing of the past. A large percentage of the men returned to work yesterday and the loading throughout the field was almost double that of Thursday. In the Tug River district it was different. But little coal was delivered there yesterday. The output of this district is small, compared with the Elkhorn or Flat Top regions proper. The march of the strikers through the field yesterday amounted to comparatively nothing. There was only a small number of men in line, possibly not over a hundred in all, and their walk was ineffectual. No disturbances have been recorded so disturbances had been recorded so far last night.

CUT OFF FOOD OF HELPLESS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 14.—The work of the strikers in attempting to bring out all men who are still in the employ of the coal companies went steadily on. Their campaigns against the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was nearly over last night, most of these men being out, and the union was paying more attention to the fire bosses, clerks and others who had taken the places of those who quit. Pressure was being brought to bear on them in every possible way. Quite a number of the fire bosses throughout the region have already stopped work because they had been asked to take the strikers' places, and at a meeting held here yesterday afternoon about a dozen more consented to join the strikers.

The officials of the coal companies in this region are complaining of what they call "secret intimidation" of the families of workmen who have remained loyal to the employers, threatening to boycott merchants who sell to the families of men who are working, most of the men being kept at the collieries, while their families are at home. One official said in part:

Appeals From Unprotected Families.

"Every day we get appeals from these families and in every instance the company takes it upon itself to see that they shall not hereafter be cut off from their daily supply of the necessities of life."

The miners' leaders as a rule will not talk on the matter of boycott, but the rank and file of the strikers openly admit that they try to boycott all men whom they look upon as being "unfair" workers.

During a terrific thunder storm in this region last night a mule barn of the Delaware and Hudson company's Boston colliery at Larksville was struck by lightning and set on fire. The flames spread rapidly and 300 strikers formed a bucket brigade and prevented the fire from spreading to the big coal breaker, which is in close proximity to the burning barn.

Irrigation Bill Through Congress.

Washington, June 14.—The house yesterday passed the irrigation bill by a vote of 146 to 55. Many amendments were offered, but only one, except those offered by the committee, was adopted. It was of a minor character. The bill already has passed the senate.

LARKINS, THE DRUG MAN

FOOLED HIS SUPERIOR.

An Astonished Pasha and a Lieutenant Who Won Promotion.

Kassim Pasha when minister of war for Egypt was very particular in regard to the personal appearance of his officers and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met upon the street a lieutenant who had bearded the pasha and disregarded his orders. "To what regiment do you belong?" demanded the indignant minister. "To the —— regiment, at Abasseuh," replied the frightened lieutenant. "Get into my carriage at once so that I can carry you to the encampment and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

The young man obeyed, and the twain rode along gloomily enough for some time, when the pasha stopped his carriage and entered an office where he would be detained for some time on business. Seizing the opportunity, the culprit sprang from the vehicle, darted into a neighboring barber's stall and regained his post before the return of his jailer minus his beard. For the remainder of the route the officer buried his face in his hands and seemed the picture of apprehension.

Abasseuh was reached at last, and all the officers were assembled to witness the degradation of their comrade, who all the while kept well in the rear of his chief. "Come forward, you son of a dog!" cried the irate pasha, when there stepped before him an officer with a face as clean as a baby's and a look of the most supreme innocence. His excellency gave one look of blank astonishment and then, with an appreciative smile breaking over his war worn features, turned to the assembled officers and said, "Here, gentlemen, your old minister is a fool, and your young lieutenant is a captain."

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live In the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as gigantic.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitants.—International Monthly.

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog. Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it.

The Indian Creation Legend.

The earliest source for the religion of India is the hymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Purusha, who is simply a "magnified man." A pantheistic turn, however, is given to this conception under the influence of which Purusha becomes the "all in all" and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni and from his breath Vayu, space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory when freed from its primitive elements becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind."—Morris Jastrow, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

James Settled It.

Two boys in a rural Scotch district were one day discussing what sign it was when the cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One of them said it was a sign of getting married, while the other said it was a sign that you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and I am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich."

Just then a local worthy, known as "Daft Jamie," was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie as he took his pipe from his mouth, "it's a sign you're not deaf."

Scotch Thrift.

The ferryboat was well on her way when a violent storm arose, and fears were entertained for her safety.

The ferryman and his mate, both Scotchmen, held a consultation, and after a short debate the ferryman turned to his passengers and remarked anxiously:

"We'll just tak' yer tuppences noo, for we no ken what might come ower us."—London Answers.

THE MEADOW ORCHID

A Legend of the Land of the Czars That Deals With Magic, Love and Happiness and One Result of the Fatal Feminine Tongue.

One warm Sunday afternoon the village maidens assembled to bathe in the river. They took off their kerchiefs and their coronet headdresses, seated themselves on the bank to cool off and began to gossip. One maiden alone sat silent, Frosya, an orphan, poor, but beautiful, with fair skin and eyes as blue as the gentian, which the Russians call "the flight of the falcon." So the other girls began to tease her: "Have you no dearly beloved friend, Frosinya? Who is he, where is he? Is he handsome, is he rich?"

No sooner had she said this than all the maidens cried, with one accord, "The adder!" and took to their heels. And upon her kerchief, which Frosya had thrown upon the grass, behold, a huge black adder lay coiled. She cried out in fear. But the adder beat its tail upon the ground and was transformed into a wonderfully handsome young man. There he stood before her, with a golden cap upon his flowing curls, his eyes flashing fire, and honeyed words fell from his lips. And he said to her:

"Did you mean it when you declared that you were ready to marry the adder?"

She knew not what reply to make, but gazed at him and thought to herself, "Whence came such a wise and handsome youth?" And he, divining her thoughts, replied to them, "I am no common man, but the czar of the waters, and my empire is close at hand in a deep pool on golden sands."

And he read in her eyes that she consented to go with him. Then he grasped her with his powerful hand, and together they sank down into the deep realm of the waters.

Great was Frosya's happiness. She could not believe in it. He was so good, so wise; she had never seen such people, and there is none such anywhere as the czar of the waters. But Frosya was foolish. Seven years did she dwell with him in the deep pool in his palace of crystal, and the seven years passed as one day, and there need not have been any end to her bliss. A girl and a boy had been born to them. Then, all at once, without any cause, she became sad, longed for the earth, to behold her native hamlet and her friends once more. So he let her go, with the children, for three days after having exacted a promise that neither she nor the children, either by word or by hint, should reveal the name of her husband or where she lived. And all this she promised, with fearful oaths. Then her husband escorted her to the dam. At the end of three days she was to come to the same spot and cry "Cuckoo!" thrice, whereupon he would swim at once to meet her.

She kept her oath, but her friends coaxed and questioned the children. The boy to all queries replied simply, "I don't know." But the girl told everything. This was all the envious gossips wanted. They ran and told all to their husbands and brothers, who immediately ran to the dam and uttered the magic words. And when the czar appeared they beat him to death. But before he died he contrived to say to Frosya: "I have to thank thee, my dear wife, that I am now come to my death through thee and my daughter. Henceforth fly thou ever as a gray cuckoo and repeat thou ever my call, 'Cuckoo!' in sadness of heart from early spring until St. Peter's day [St. Peter's day, June 29 (July 12, O. S.)], and from that day forth may every bird, both great and small, beat thee and pursue thee. And mayest thou, my daughter, my betrayer, be turned into a nettle bush, and may that weed, the fiery, forever burn thine eyes wheresoever thou mayest be, that thou mayest weep forever, remembering thy father's death. But to my loyal son, who kept his father's command, I make this bequest: That he shall be the bird beloved which dwells and sings in gardens and amid shady groves for the joy of happy people, for the consolation of those who weep, the nightingale."

And from that day forth the Russian people have called the meadow orchid "the cuckoo's tears." [It is also known as "the cuckoo's slippers."]—Isabel F. Hapgood in New York Post.

A Way Out.

A small girl told a falsehood. Her mother, with great dignity, led the youthful offender to the library and, sitting down beside her, said: "You know, Katharine, grandma has gone to heaven and papa has gone to heaven, but if you tell untruths you cannot go to heaven with them. You will have to go to the other place."

The little maiden looked very grave for a moment and said, "Say a swear word, mamma, and come to the other place too."—New York Tribune.

Clerical Customer (arousing himself from nap in barber's chair)—Finished, eh?

Barber—Yes, sir; quite some time ago.

Clerical Customer—Indeed! Then I must have been indulging in a quiet nap.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended your church last Sunday.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge. It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

ARGUMENT HEARD IN RAILWAY CASE

Held to Be Invalid By Attorney General Sheets—East Liverpool Man Wants to Be Head of Examining Board.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, June 14. — Arguments were made in the supreme court by Prosecutor Jason H. Brookes, of Columbiana; County Solicitor P. H. Kiser, of Cleveland, and ex-Prosecutor R. M. Wanamaker, of Summit, on a motion to advance the hearing of the celebrated tax case involving the counties through which the C. & P. road passes and have it tried on its merits. The decision of the court will probably be given on Tuesday, the regular day for the handing down of decisions. Prosecutor Lewis, of Jefferson, has filed a brief with the court asking that the report of Master Commissioner C. C. Connell be set aside. The suit was brought by the auditor of Tuscarawas against auditors of Columbiana, Stark, Mahoning, Portage, Summit, Cuyahoga, Jefferson, Carroll and Belmont for a reapportionment of the valuation of the C. & P. line.

Attorney General Sheets, in an informal opinion, holds that the law enacted by the last general assembly creating a board of examiners for horseshoers is unconstitutional, in that it is not of uniform application. He says it compels those who are qualified to follow the trade to take out a license and exempts the jack-of-all trades who only works at the calling now and then. He is willling to bring a test suit to determine the legality of the board. Governor Nash has not made his appointments under the law. An East Liverpool man aspires to membership on the board. The horseshoers of that city joined in the movement which resulted in the passage of the bill to establish the board.

The suit in mandamus against Governor Nash to compel him to appoint a successor to Lieutenant Governor Nippert and to oust State Senator Frank B. Archer, of Bellaire, from the lieutenant governorship, which he claims to hold by right of succession, was filed yesterday in the supreme court.

The supreme court consented to the filing of the case, and upon the request of counsel on each side promised to hear and decide it before the adjournment of court, the latter part of June.

A Washingson special says that on July 1 the postoffices at East Palestine, Mingo Junction and Minerva will become international money offices.

The United States bankruptcy court at Columbus has granted the application of Ronaldo Runyan, of Wellsville, to be freed from his indebtedness.

A STOLEN HORSE

Rig and Thief Thought to Be in the Vicinity of This City.

George F. Irwin, chief of police of Troy, O., in a letter to Chief Thompson, states that on last Tuesday a horse and wagon were stolen from William Snyder of that town and that it is thought that the thief is in this vicinity, as he started in this direction.

The horse is of a bay color, about ten years old, slightly over fifteen hands high, weighs 1,000 pounds, both front feet and the left hind foot white, a good driver and high headed. The wagon is described as having a stick seat, red running gear and rubber tires.

those seen was Councilman Criss McConnell, who said:

"I am at a loss to know just what the manager is driving at when he says the company 'does not intend to do the work until given a chance to make a defense before council.' A defense of what? Does he desire to defend himself for having asked for the francaise?? I think not, since it is worth $100,000 if it's worth a cent, and it cost him nothing.

"The action taken by council was not hasty. The residents of the Lisbon road have been making preparations for the past two months to take their request before the council. The company was notified Friday morning, June 6, that the council would be asked to take action at its next meeting. At that time the manager was waited upon by a committee of four men representing the taxpayers of our community and their interests. It was the desire of this committee to avoid, as far as possible, doing anything that would be a hardship to the company, and had they been given any encouragement whatever the council would never have been asked to consider the matter. Mr. Healy was asked if he would proceed with the construction of the road, as he had pledged himself to do. He would give no direct answer. The representatives then requested that he relinquish the franchise for the Pleasant Heights extension, in order that others might be given an opportunity to build the line. This was also refused. At this conference Mr. Healy was assured that he would be paid the $5,000 promised, which the corporation's attorney had used as an excuse for the non-compliance with the law, but even this had no effect upon the manager.

"Mr. Healy was then given notice that the question would be taken before the council. When this notice was given the committee did not consider that it was under any obligation to inform the lawyers of the corporation, and it was not done.

"Mr. Healy speaks of a conference with Pleasant Heights citizens as the proper method for settling the matter, and gives it as his opinion that an amicable adjustment of the question could be effected in this manner. Now, I believe I am fairly well posted as to the general feeling of the Pleasant Heights citizens, being one of them, and there is not a man in that section that could be persuaded to serve on a committee of that character. They take the position, and it is a just one too, that for more than two years they have been patiently waiting for some action from the corporation. They have been as completely ignored as though they did not exist, and now the time for overtures is past. They now propose to ascertain through the city council, and through the courts, if need be, whether a regularly enacted law can be disregarded at the will of the East Liverpool street railway corporation."

KILMEN'S OFFICERS

Kilnmen's local No. 9 held a very interesting session in Brotherhood hall last evening, when officers for the new term were elected. These, however, will not take their seats until the first meeting in July. One new member was obligated, and one member was received by transfer. There were some surprises when the votes were counted in the election, and the office of president is no longer held by Aaron Coleman, although he secured another office.

THE LANDLORD'S ACT

Legal Move Is Made Against the United Irish League.

WRIT ISSUED AGAINST LEADERS.

Dublin, June 14.—At the instance of Lord De Freyne a writ has been issued against a large number of members of the Irish parliamentary party on the charge of conspiracy in connection with the tenant troubles on the De Freyne estate, Roscommon county. Among the defendants are John Redmond, John Dillon, W. J. O'Brien, J. G. Swift MacNeill, Conor O'Kelly and the members of the standing committee of the United Irish League, which includes Michael Davitt and a number of the former members of parliament. The Freeman's Journal is also a defendant. Lord De Freyne seeks an injunction and damages.

Altogether 30 writs have been issued in the De Freyne action. The action is really taken by the landlords' association, and it is the beginning of a struggle of the organized landlords against the United Irish League, which is feared to be severe and far-reaching, as the landlords have ample backing.

John Redmond, in an interview in the house of commons last night, frankly admitted that this was the biggest move the landlords, with the support of Dublin Castle, had yet undertaken against the Irish National movement.

Colonel Saunderson, a Conservative member of the house of commons and lord lieutenant of County Calvin, in an interview on the subject, said:

"Yes, an organized attack must be met by organized action, and the Irish landlords have now resolved to take such action. The same course will be followed wherever they have been attacked by the league. I am happy to say that there are sufficient funds behind the landlords to fight any battles which may arise."

William Redmond, James O'Kelly, Patrick O'Brien, John Hayden, Sir Thomas Esmonde, Patrick McHugh and some of the best known priests in Ireland are also among the defendants in the action of Lord De Freyne.

Strikers Promised No Violence at Pawtucket.

Pawtucket, R. I., June 14.—Action which the authorities hope means the beginning of the end of the reign of violence incident to the street railway strike was taken yesterday by High Sheriff Hunter C. White removing his deputy sheriffs from the street cars. He did this on representations made to him that the deputies accomplished no good purpose, but incited the crowds to violence.

After the withdrawal of these men the city became quiet. The 1,500 troops ordered out by Governor Kimball Thursday were still on duty yesterday, but if conditions warrant they will be withdrawn gradually, the first instalment to leave today. There was no rioting yesterday. Seven men were arrested for misdemeanors committed on Pawtucket avenue, the route of cars from Providence to this city. The lines of the Pawtucket city system of the United Traction company were not in operation, and the lines in Central Falls, Cumberland and Albion, suburban towns, were tied up. Today it is proposed to reopen the city system under the protection of the police, assisted by the militia.

Rev. Mr. Temple May Accept.

Washington, Pa., June 14.—The Rev. Henry W. Temple, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church of Washington, has been elected to the presidency of Monmouth college, at Monmouth, Ills. It is understood that he will accept the position. The Rev. Mr. Temple has been pastor at Washington for more than eight years, having come from Pittsburg, where he was pastor of a Reformed Presbyterian church in the East End. His liberal views, however, were responsible for a conflict with some of the high church officials and he and several other ministers left the denomination.

Uniontown, Pa., June 14.—James Washington was found guilty of murder in the first degree last evening. He was charged with murdering John Callahan and assaulting Myrtle Stevens, at Dunbar.

ST. ANTHONY'S DAY OBSERVED.

Pittsburg, June 14.—Yesterday was the day of the feast of St. Anthony of Padua in the Roman Catholic church and throughout the entire civilized world it is more or less observed. This day made Troy Hill, Allegheny, known throughout the world through the late Father Mollinger, who at the shrine he erected on Troy Hill, in honor of his patron saint, was used as God's agent in granting cures to those having faith.

Early yesterday morning the Troy Hill and Mt. Troy cars were crowded with persons going to the church. The first service was high mass at 6 a .m., which was sang by Father J. B. Duffner, pastor of the church. At 7:30 there was a second high mass, sung by Father J. Sedlnair. The solemn high mass at 9:30 was the event of the day. The celebrant was Father A. A. Lambing, of Wilkinsburg; the deacon, Father Bulliar, of Homestead, and the sub-deacon, Father Schram, of Allentown, while Father Leonard Stenger was master of ceremonies. The sermon was delivered by Father Devlin, of the Holy Cross church.

There was a great demand for small bottles of holy water, prepared especially for the occasion. The demand was greater than in former years.

FEARS CHOLERA'S RAVAGES.

Medical Commanding Official Afraid of Many Deaths In Philippines. Smallpox Prevalent.

Washington, June 14.—A rather alarming situation with regard to the epidemic of cholera in the Philippines was set out in a report received by Surgeon General Forewood from Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman, at present in charge of the medical department of the army in the islands. The report says in part:

The appearance of the disease at Manila in March was attributed in some quarters to vegetables coming into the islands from infected Chinese ports, and in others to the drinking of Pasig river water, foul with the sewage of the city. Lieutenant Colonel Heizeman said that the number of different points attacked by the epidemic and the consequent infection of many streams makes probable a large number of deaths before the rains shall occur, which ended the two great epidemics in the eighties. The army, he says, is much better protected than the native population or than civilian Americans in the islands, because of the care which is exercised in supplying good food and water.

In Manila alone a total of 277 cases, with 215 deaths, had occurred up to April 15, the date of the report, with 453 cases and 308 deaths outside the city. In the provinces the disease attacked 22 different places. In the Camarines, at Nueva Caceres, the disease appeared, and this has been the only point where the army has suffered, two cavalrymen and an infantryman having the disease. The colored troops naturally mix much more with the natives than the whites, drinking the water in the shacks which they visit, and eating native food, and they are thus much more liable to contract cholera.

Smallpox has also appeared and has been more prevalent, it is stated, this year than in any, except the first, of American occupation. The wife of an American army officer in Manila has been attacked by it.

CONDEMNED MEN BAPTIZED.

Charles Davis and Henry Taylor Receive Rites of Baptist Church, In Pittsburg Jail.

Pittsburg, June 14.—In accordance with the doctrines of the religious faith accepted by the two condemned murderers, Charles Davis and Henry Taylor, both colored, yesterday afternoon the sacrament of baptism according to the rites of the Baptist church was administered to the two persons. This is the first time that an immersion was held in the county jail, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. D. Patterson, of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Howard avenue, Allegheny. Taylor will be hanged on June 24 and Davis will walk to the gallows two days later.

CAPT. CROZIER'S NOMINATION.

Senate Considered the Matter In Executive Session.

Washington, June 14.—During the greater part of yesterday the senate was in executive session, the nomination of Captain Crozier to be chief of ordnance of the army being the particular subject under consideration.

The president's message urging the establishment of reciprocity relations between the United States and Cuba was received after the senate had gone into secret session. The doors were opened, the message read and then the secret session was resumed.

PIMPLES

And other eruptions which mar the skin are more than a disfigurement and annoyance; they are a positive detriment to the business interests and social successes of the man they mark. Other things being equal, the man with a smooth skin and clear complexion will find it easier to get a good position or a good wife than the man whose face shows the impurity of his blood. That's the real point. The blood is bad. And for that very reason any treatment which is designed to cleanse the skin must cleanse the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cleanses the blood from the clogging impurities which breed and feed disease, and so cures pimples, boils, eczema, and other diseases which have their cause in impure blood.

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I have used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' in a case of scrofula, and cured it," writes Mr. Wm. D. Shamblin, of Remy, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Territory. "I took five bottles of it for my blood. I had 'ringworms' on me and I would burn them off and they would come right back, and they were on me when I commenced using 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which took them away, and I haven't been bothered anymore."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

Temperature of Forests.

For many years the Swiss government has been making observations through its forestry stations on the temperature of the air, of the trees and the soil in the forests. These observations show that the temperature in the forests is always below the temperature outside. The temperature also varies according to the trees composing the forests.

A beech forest is always cooler than a forest of larch. As to the trunks of the trees, they are always cooler than the surrounding air. Regarding the temperature of the soil, it is found that in the forest the temperature is invariably below that of the air. Outside the forest the soil is always warmer than the air in summer and colder in winter.

Preserving a Shark's Head.

When a big shark is taken on board ship, the skull is usually preserved, the flesh being removed from the bones, and it is a favorite pastime with sailors to crawl one after another through the distended jaws. It would be far from safe to do this, however, when the head has been but freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything be placed between them.

The Moslem Creed.

A German Christian missionary who has worked for many years among the Mohammedans says: "Honesty compels every candid student to acknowledge that the old view formerly entertained in Christian circles concerning Mohammedanism, according to which the teachings of the great Arabian prophet are nothing but devil's doctrines and dogmas, is altogether incorrect. In reality, Mohammedanism is nothing but a rationalistic type of Christianity in the form of a most unfortunate state religion. The times are past when scolding about the Moslem creed as the production of the devil will satisfy, and the struggle against Islam on these premises is a failure. Practically all of the mission literature that in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was written against Mohammedanism is useless."

A Novelty In Hair.

What is home without a fashion paper? Here we pick up one of these valuable journals, and this is the first item of important information which meets the inquiring eye:

"Hair is worn on the top of the head." So glad to learn it! We always supposed it was worn on the soles of the feet.

None Apparent From Labor Controversies, Owing to Agricultural Prosperity.

No diminution in business is apparent from labor controversies, owing to the prosperous condition of the agricultural sections and the bright outlook for this year's crops. Retail distribution of light weight wearing apparel has felt the stimulus of higher temperature. Railway earnings in May were 8.7 per cent larger than last year and 21.7 per cent above those of 1900.

There continues to be a wide discrepancy between the amount of business offered and the contracts closed in many branches of the iron and steel industry, owing to the inability of producers to assure delivery at a specified time. Contracts running well into next year indicate that the end of activity is not near. Pressure is still most conspicuous for railway and structural supplies, and agricultural implement works are crowded with orders. Sales of Bessemer pig iron at Pittsburg for delivery next year were recently made at $16.50, while immediate shipments command about $5 more. Limited stocks are still the cause of steadiness in all branches of textiles. Holders are not urging sales and buyers show a disposition to wait. Tardy deliveries of sample pieces by the woolen mills has caused complaint among the clothiers and fall orders are not placed freely. Wool sells more freely at leading eastern markets and quotations are steady.

BROADENED FINAL HOUR.

But Market Was Dull and Hesitating Most of Friday.

New York, June 14.—After a dull and hesitating market during the greater part of yesterday with isolated upward movements here and there, the market broadened in the final hour and moved upwards quite generally with a considerable show of strength. The activity was attributed to the same speculative leader who had been concerned in all recent important movements, and whose return to Wall street this week gave immediate rise to a show of awakening. Whatever the motive of the buying the bull leadership secured a larger following yesterday than at any time this week, notwithstanding a number of news developments not immediately encouraging to a rise in prices. The preliminary figures of the week's currency movement, which are usually the center of interest in a Friday's market, gave no promise of a strong bank statement. The subtreasury absorption of $2,406,000 apparently has been little more than offset by the balance of receipts from the interior.

The advance of a point or over in the Reading stocks was an important sympathetic influence upon the late market, but there was no news to show a prospect of an early settlement of the strike. The increase in the demand for stocks was incontestable nevertheless. In some cases the movement was due to individual causes. Sugar advanced on the oversold condition of the market for the refined product and was benefitted also by the reports of a special presidential message to congress reinforcing the recommendation for Cuban reciprocity.

There were a number of very large individual buying orders for Mexican Central executed in the early market but the buying was not followed up. The drop of 8½ points in General Electric was probably due to reports of a new combination of electrical manufacturing companies, backed by influential capitalists. The stock afterwards rallied four points. Chicago and Eastern Illinois rose 4½ points further on persisting rumors of an offer for control. The day's reports of railroad earnings showed a continuance of the increases over last year's corresponding period. The market closed rather quiet, but steady.

There was a large demand for Wabash debenture Bs at an advance of 2½ per cent. The Burlington joint 4s were also in demand. The market generally was firm. Total sales, par value, 3,690,000.

United States 3s declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

Manias of Authors.

In a recent article on the "Mania of Authors" in the Revue Universelle of Paris we are told that Darwin always practiced on his old fiddle before writing; Chateaubriand while dictating to his secretary was in the habit of walking in his bare feet; Schiller and Goethe could not write unless their feet were on ice; Lord Derby always filled his mouth with brandy cherries; Fenimore Cooper used to chew gumdrops; Byron filled his pockets with truffles; Theophile Gautier burned incense.

An Insinuating Missive.

He was a German student, and this was the letter he addressed to his uncle:

Dear Uncle—A very strange thing happened yesterday. I went to see a friend of mine at the bank who knows your handwriting very well, and he thought you were ill, as I had not lately presented any checks signed by you. He begs to be remembered to you, as also do I, and you might let my friend see your signature again. If you are very busy, you might send a blank check, and I will fill it in. Yours affectionately, KARL.

NO SECRET DICKERS BY RAILROAD LINES

HE NEVER SPOKE AGAIN.

The Dog That Served the Purpose of a Ventriloquist.

The following story is told of a ventriloquist, now famous, but at the time of this happening so hard up he used to walk between the cities where he was to appear. On one of these tours he came to Philadelphia on foot, and on the road he picked up a miserable little dog "because it looked so much like he felt." The story will explain what became of the dog.

The first house he came to was a saloon, and of course he wanted a drink. He had no money, but went in anyhow to see what he could do. The proprietor, a German, said:

"Well, what will you have?"

He said, "I'll take a little whisky," and then, turning to the dog, he asked:

"What will you have?"

The answer came very promptly:

"I'll take a ham sandwich."

The German was so surprised he almost fainted. He looked at the dog a moment and then asked:

"What did you say?"

The dog replied:

"I said a ham sandwich."

Hans thought it wonderful that a dog should be able to talk and asked who had trained him, how long it had taken, etc., and wound up with:

"How much you take for him?"

"Oh," said Mr. Ventriloquist, "I wouldn't sell him at any price, but I am a little hard up now, and if you will lend me $50 I'll leave him with you till I bring back the money."

"All right," said Hans. "I just want him for a little while so I can show him to some smart people I know around here."

So everything was settled, the money paid, etc., and as the ventriloquist went out he turned and waved his hand to the dog and said:

"Well, goodby, Jack. I'll come back soon."

The dog looked at him and said:

"You mean son of a gun, to sell me for $50 after all I've done for you! So help me Moses, I'll never speak another word as long as I live!"

There is a pink variety of lily of the valley which is often grown in England, though seldom seen with us.

A palm tree which grows on the banks of the Amazon has leaves thirty to fifty feet in length and ten to twelve feet in breadth.

Standard and "stand by" plants and varieties should be the rule of the beginner. Experiment with new flowers and varieties only in a small way.

Study color effects if you would have a really beautiful garden. The loveliest colors often neutralize each other sadly. Clear reds and magentas, for instance, should not be close neighbors.

Know the plants as you would people if you would have them respond fully. Find out their habits, their likes and dislikes. The study is one of unfailing pleasure, and it pays rich interest in perpetual bloom.

Linnia plants are good for low hedges. Plants a foot and a half apart will soon run branches together, and the foliage is dense from the ground up. The flowers are almost as brilliant as those of the dahlia and are produced freely from July to late October.

Always Wash Before They Pray.

Moslems always bathe before they pray. They would not dare enter the house of prayer with unclean hands or feet or faces; hence when the muezzin's call is heard from the minaret five times a day faithful Moslems go first to the fountains that are found outside of every mosque and bathe themselves. There are innumerable bathhouses also in which genuine Turkish baths and massage are given.

At the same time their houses are positively filthy—too filthy, as a rule, for human beings to occupy—and the streets of Constantinople and every other Turkish town are indescribable in their nastiness. The clothing they wear is as dirty as their bodies are clean, and their food is often unfit for sanitary reasons.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Lion and the Unicorn.

The unicorn came into the royal arms with James I. It belongs to the royal arms of Scotland. The signet ring of Mary, mother of James, is in existence, having a unicorn on it. In the royal arms therefore one supporter represents England, the other Scotland.

The lion and the unicorn occur also in ancient Buddhist scriptures, placed together as supporters. Both of these animals also are seen playing draughts together in the well known Egyptian painting. But the oldest connection of the two is in the blessing of Jacob and of Moses.—Notes and Queries.

Ground Floors Scarce.

The trouble with most schemes is that when you go in the ground floor is occupied, and you are compelled to occupy the second story.—Atchison Globe.

RELICS OF EARLY DAYS.

One of the remarkable features of country life in America is the singular persistence of the rail fence and the dugout canoe. No matter how thickly settled a section may become or how long it may have been settled, these two survivors of early settlement linger on as stubbornly as ever. Today in the thickest settled parts of New England and New York the rail fence is met with, while the shad fishermen of the Potomac and James rivers and Chesapeake bay, on the banks of which the first English settlements in America were established, still manufacture and employ the old dugout canoe in making the rounds of their shad nets.

The dugout canoe is the simplest and most primitive water craft known and was used by prehistoric man, both in this country, Europe and Asia. It is made out of a log of wood by trimming the outside down to the proper proportions of a boat and by "digging out" the inside with an adz and by the aid of fire. The Potomac river dugout is today pretty much the same as it was in the days of Powhatan and differs from the general run of dugout canoes in the absence of a curved bow and stern and in having rather high sides, which rise to a summit from either end of the boat, being highest in the middle, where the seat is placed.—Washington Post.

Canny In Second Engagement.

For years a young man and young woman had been engaged, and each had economized with a view of having the more to spend when they should marry. Six months ago, however, the engagement was broken, and shortly afterward the young woman became the fiancee of another man. This man she encourages to spend his money lavishly—on her. He has bought her beautiful silver for her toilet table, the latest design and engraved with her initials; a handsome leather traveling bag completely fitted out, rugs, books and other articles to make home comfortable.

"No more economizing for me," says the girl. "If he invests so much in me, we won't be so likely to quarrel, and certainly he will not have the money to spend on another girl," which is the wisdom that rules sentiment in these modern days.—New York Press.

Those Dull Ducks.

I recall Mr. Lowell telling, jocosely, in an after dinner speech in Cambridge how he met an acquaintance (of rather lugubrious standing) whose cheerful face and happy demeanor led him to ask the cause of such exuberant felicity.

"Why," said the genial smiler, "I've discovered a way to make my fortune. We all know that the reason for the fine flavor of the wild duck is the wild celery on which it feeds. Now, I propose to feed it to the domestic duck and supply the market."

Some weeks later, on meeting his acquaintance again, Mr. Lowell found him quite depressed and inconsolable. "Why are you looking so unhappy? I thought the last time I saw you that you were on the point of making your fortune with ducks. Wouldn't it work?"

"No," was the reply; "the things won't eat it."—Atlantic.

Swindled Again.

"Ah," exclaimed Mrs. Oldcastle as she took a book from the table in the magnificent library of the new neighbors, "hand laid paper, isn't it?"

"Is it?" her hostess asked, looking at it doubtfully. "I told Josiah when I bought them books that that's one of the set of that he was payin' a whole lot too much. I'm glad it wasn't me. If I'd of went and give such a price for something that was hand laid, I'd never hear the last of it from him. WHISKEY CAUSED HIS HANGING.

Christian, on the Gallows, Attributed His Crime to Excessive Use of Liquor.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 14.—Perry Christian, the Fayette county murderer, was hanged yesterday afternoon in the state penitentiary at Moundsville. Christian faced the gallows bravely, admitted his crime and attributed it to the excessive use of whisky.

The crime for which Christian paid penalty was the result of a drinking bout. He was serving time for a crime committed in Ohio and was paroled before the completion of his sentence. He came to a lumber camp in Fayette county, W. Va., and became associated with a rough drinking gang. While under the influence of liquor he killed William Dent.

Governor Nash and Senator Foraker, of Ohio, attempted to intercede on behalf of Christian, but Governor White ignored their entreaties.

FULLER STATED FOR THE JOB.

To Be Secretary of State of Pennsylvania, if Pennypacker Is Elected.

"It is not generally known that Frank Fuller, of Fayette county, has been slated for the secretaryship of the commonwealth under Pennypacker, but such is the case. Fuller controls the politics of Fayette and delivered five delegates to Pennypacker. This is a rather small number of delegates to demand so large a reward, but the pledge of the position was made when the delegates were very much needed."

One Failure.

"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband who had just refused his wife a bonnet in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well," replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."

A Secret.

"Rich! Why so?"

"Because I want to be petted. Ma says you are an old fool, but must be petted because you are rich. But it's a great secret, and I mustn't tell it!"

Thrilling Moments.

"Johnnie," called the mother, "I want you to go to the store for me."

"Wait a second, maw," replied the youth, who was absorbed in a five cent volume. "Pepperhole Pete has thirty-seven Injuns to kill, an' it'll only take him about two minutes."—Ohio State Journal.

When stooping or sitting for some time it would change to a quick pang as I arose to an upright position. My back tired out easily when walking or standing long, and I often had headaches, dizziness, and in the mornings great depression. I took medicines, many of them, but found Doan's Kidney Pills, sold at the W. & W. pharmacy, to be more suitable for my complaint than anything I had ever tried."

MONEY IN LETTER BOXES.

People Who Try to Pay Postage In That Way.

"Here are two pennies just turned in to the superintendent of delivery by one of the carriers," remarked an official of the Washington city postoffice a few days ago. "The amount of cash gathered up by the collectors of mail is really surprising. Hardly a day passes without a certain percentage of the coin of the realm finding its way to my desk through the medium of the street letter boxes.

"It is hard to believe, but hundreds of persons every day in the year drop unstamped letters in the box with pennies to accompany them to cover the postage. They think the money will do just as well as stamps. But they are mistaken. All such unstamped letters, if there is no identifying mark on the envelope, ultimately land in the dead letter office.

"It often happens," added the postal official, "that coins placed in envelopes for transmission work their way through the paper. In nine cases out of ten, even when the money so lost is no more than a dime, this office is notified of the occurrence by the loser, who requests that he be reimbursed."—Washington Star.

Lonely In the Gallery.

Years ago our theaters did not have the large audiences they now have, and it was a common sight to see a house of "empty benches."

"I was employed at the gallery box office of one of the theaters," says a reminiscent Philadelphian, "and one stormy evening sold but one ticket, that to a boy about thirteen years of age, who rushed up to the window and asked if I thought he could get a good seat. I replied that I thought he could. I felt sorry for the little fellow and wondered how he would feel sitting in the gallery all by himself. After the first act was over I was aroused by a tap on the window and, upon opening it, saw my solitary ticket purchaser standing there with a very sad expression on his face.

"'Mister,' he said, 'I'm the only one up there, and it's so lonesome that I am afraid to stay. Won't you give me another ticket, and I'll bring our gang around tomorrow night to help you out?'

"I took the lad to the manager and explained the situation. That boy witnessed the balance of the performance from a plush covered seat in the front row."—Philadelphia Times.

Winning a Kiss.

Aunt Hannah—I saw that young man kiss you, Jane. How did it come about?

Jane—In the most natural way in the world, auntie. He asked me if I would be offended if he kissed me, and I told him it was impossible for me to say until I knew what it was like.—Boston Transcript.

Men and Apes.

Were it not, as Huxley says, that "the ignorance of the so called educated classes is colossal," there might be need for apology in restatement of the fact that man is not descended from the ape. The relationship between them is lateral, not lineal, both being offshoots of the same stock, but each remaining, of course in very different degrees of development, isolated groups of mammals.—Edward Clodd's "Thomas Henry Huxley."

A Pair of Them.

He—The great trouble with Gabley is that he talks too much.

She—That's strange! When he has been with me, he scarcely said a word.

He—Oh, he is too much of a gentleman to interrupt.

MISS ROSE OWENS,

No. 720 Seventeenth St., WASHINGTON, D. C.

"If every suffering woman has the same experience with Wine of Cardui that I had, your medicine will be most popular. About a year ago I began to have a worn out tired feeling with lassitude, pains in the back and head which kept increasing every month. I felt that I needed something, but to get the right medicine was the trouble. I finally decided on your Wine of Cardui and only needed to take three bottles when I was fully recovered."

Miss Rose Owens.

WHEN Miss Rose Owens, who has a responsible position in the Government service at Washington, D. C., decided to try Wine of Cardui, she made a wise choice. Over a million women have been relieved of female weakness by this same Wine of Cardui. It is not a strong medicine but may be taken every day in the year by any woman with benefit. It does not force results, but corrects derangements of the menstrual organs. It strengthens the nervous system, gives tone to the bodily functions, acts directly on the genital organs, and is the finest tonic for women known to the science of medicine.

If you are a suffering woman we would say to you that Wine of Cardui seldom fails to completely cure any case of female ills. We say emphatically, it never fails to benefit. Every day hundreds of sufferers are writing to our Ladies' Advisory Department. The letters are opened by persons competent to give advice. Mrs. Jones was cured by following the advice which was freely given her by the Ladies' Advisory Department. Miss Owens was cured without advice by just buying a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from her druggist and taking this great medicine in the privacy of her home. No doctor's examination, treatment or advice is necessary. You have read what these two cured women have written. Is this not enough to lead you to determine to be rid of suffering?

August 13, 1900, Mrs. W. H. Jones, of Cameron, Mo., writes:

"I suffered terribly at monthly periods for three years. I would sometimes go for seven months with no flow at all. Now I have my health back again and am expecting to be confined in January. I cannot praise your medicine enough."

Washington, June 14.—The president's reciprocity message gave senators a live topic of conversation yesterday, but so far as was apparent there was no change in the situation. There was a disposition on the part of the leaders on both sides of the controversy to claim, when speaking publicly, some advantage from the message. The straight reciprocity men urged that the effect would be to cause at least some of the beet sugar Republicans to abandon their opposition.

Claim of Beet Sugar Men.

The beet sugar leaders declared at the close of the day that the message had caused no loss whatever to them and that all those senators who had stood with them Thursday were still with them. They also asserted that the president's interposition in the matter had had the effect of causing to hesitate some senators who heretofore had not taken a positive stand against reduction, because of the feeling that the president should leave congress to deal with the subject in its present stage.

There was still more or less canvassing of the wisdom of holding a Republican caucus and it was probable that ultimately one will be held, but no date was mentioned.

The president's message to congress yesterday said in part:

Portion of President's Message.

"To the senate and house of representatives: I deem it important before the adjournment of the present session of congress to call attention to the following expressions in the message which in the discharge of the duty imposed upon me by the constitution, I sent to congress on the first Tuesday in December, last."

An extract from the message follows, and he also says this is but reiterating President McKinley's recommendation, in his messages of Dec. 5, 1898, and Dec 5, 1899. He then quotes from President McKinley's words. Then he says in part:

"Yesterday, June 12, I received by cable, from the American minister in Cuba, a most earnest appeal from President Palma for legislative relief before it is too late and (his) country is financially ruined.'

"The present tariff law was designed to promote the adoption of such a reciprocity treaty, and expressly provided for a reduction not to exceed 20 per cent upon goods coming from a particular country, leaving the tariff rates on the same articles unchanged as regards all other countries.

"Objection has been made to the granting of the reduction on the ground that the substantial benefit would not go to the agricultural producer of sugar, but would inure to the American sugar refiners. In my judgment provision can, and should, be made which will guarantee us against this possibility, without having recourse to a measure of doubtful policy, such as bounty in the form of a rebate.

Question of Schedules Don't Figure.

"The question as to which if any of the different schedules of the tariff ought most properly to be revised does not enter into this matter in any way or shape. We are concerned with getting a friendly reciprocal arrangement with Cuba. This arrangement applies to all the articles that Cuba grows or produces. It is not in our power to determine what these articles shall be; and any discussion of the tariff as it affects special schedules, or countries other than Cuba, is wholly aside from the subject matter to which I call your attention.

"Some of our citizens oppose the lowering of the tariff on Cuban products, just as three years ago they opposed the admission of the Hawaiian islands, lest free trade with them might ruin certain of our interests here. In the actual event their fears proved baseless as regards Hawaii, and their apprehensions as to the damage to any industry of our own because of the proposed measure of reciprocity with Cuba seem to me equally baseless. In my judgment no American industry will be hurt, and many American industries will be benefited, by the proposed action.

Should Look After Cuban Market.

"It is to our advantage as a nation that the growing Cuban market should be controlled by American producers. The events following the war with Spain and the prospective building of the Isthmian canal, render it certain that we must take in the future a far greater interest than hitherto in what happens through out the West Indies, Central America and the adjacent coasts and waters. We expect Cuba to treat us on an exceptional footing politically and we should put her on the same exceptional position economically. The proposed action is in line with the course we have pursued as regards all the islands with which we have been brought into relations of varying intimacy by the Spanish war. Porto Rico and Hawaii have been included within our tariff lines, to their great benefit as well as ours, and without any of the feared detriment to our own industries. The Philippines, which stand in a different relation, have been granted substantial tariff concessions.

"Cuba is an independent republic, but a republic which has assumed certain special obligations as regards her international position in compliance with our request. I ask for her certain special economic concessions in return; these economic concessions to benefit us as well as her.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"White House, June 13, 1902."

Root Issues Defense of Wood.

Secretary Root authorized yesterday the statement that General Wood's payment of three drafts for $2,880 each to F. B. Thurber for the circulation of reciprocity literature was approved by the president and the war department.

As military governor of Cuba, Secretary Root points out that General Wood had Root pointed out that General Wood had revenues for any purpose that, in his judgment, would advance the interests of the island.

It is the belief of the president and the secretary of war that the expenditures the beet sugar men now criticize were wise and justified by the situation in the island, which demanded that something be done in the interest of planters and of closer commercial relations with the United States.

Because of his position as governor, Secretary Root said that General Wood was in duty bound to administer his office for the benefit of Cuba, and to do all he conscientiously could to advance its interests.

F. B. Thurber and the Export Association acted merely as distributing agents and were employed by General Wood because they had extended mailing lists and facilities for circulating the documents.

Secretary Root said that neither he nor General Wood had any knowledge that the association was also employed by Mr. Havemeyer, of the sugar trust.

GAVE HIM HIS OWN WAY.

And Then the Customer Brought the Shoe Clerk to Time.

"Now, there," said the shoe salesman, "is just what you want."

"Is it?" asked the prospective customer. "I thought I said"—

"Just let me put it on," interrupted the salesman.

"But it is my recollection"—

"Oh!"

"Let me put on the other." Then, after a moment: "There you are, sir. Couldn't be better. Three-fifty, please."

"For what?"

"But I don't want the shoes. You asked me to let you put them on, and I was courteous enough to let you do it. I always try to be obliging. You said they were just what I wanted, but that was your judgment, and I'm accustomed to back my own. Now, if you've had all the divertisement in this matter that you desire, will you please trot me out a pair of shoes according to the plans and specifications I gave you when I came in, and perhaps we can do business? I have found by experience that the only way to get what one wants from a shoe clerk is to let him have his own way for the first fifteen or twenty minutes, and then he may become tractable."—Chicago Post.

The Real Drummer.

"The term 'drummer,'" said a traveling salesman for a Market street wholesale house, "has come to be regarded as synonymous with cheek, flashiness and dissipation. Just why this should be I don't know, unless people get the idea from stage jokes and comic papers. Perhaps years ago there was some justification for it, but there is no room for that sort of man today. Competition is too keen. The traveling salesman who stands well with his trade and with his own firm must attend strictly to business. It may sound strange and contrary to general belief, but most men in my line of work are of a religious turn. Some get into the churchgoing habit while stopping over Sunday in small towns, where there is nothing else to do. They get interested in religion and wind up by joining the church. Then, too, the country merchant is usually a man of affairs in his town and is generally a pillar of the church, and the churchgoing drummer is apt to make a greater impression on him than does one who is more worldly."—Philadelphia Record.

The Java Mangosteen.

"The most delicious of all the fruits of Java," writes a correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, "is the mangosteen. For years an enormous reward awaited the man who would bring a basket to the court of Holland, but unfortunately the fruit is too perishable, and to taste it you must go to the country where it grows.

Incased in a hard purple shell, lined with an exquisite pink gauze, are a number of snow white sections something like those of an orange, only each one growing smaller as they round the core. Each section contains one seed incased in a substance like the pulp of the grape. To describe the flavor would be impossible, but if you can imagine a perfect blending of the flavor of the grape, orange, pineapple and banana you may have a notion of the delicious flavor of the mangosteen."

Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O, Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by tem—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

Kansas Border Warfare

How Judge Lynch Broke Up Cleveland's Jayhawkers

From the beginning of the civil war until peace was declared the Kansas border from the Nebraska line to the Indian Territory was the scene of lawlessness and disorder. The demoralizing effects of civil war never found more remarkable exemplification than in the history of Cleveland's jayhawkers.

Congressman Charles F. Cochran of the St. Joseph district, who was an eyewitness of the remarkable scenes occurring in that reign of terror, tells an interesting story of the final breaking up of the gang.

"In the earlier years of the war," says Mr. Cochran, "thieves regularly organized into companies, with captains whose authority was recognized by the rank and file, with headquarters in the towns and cities of eastern Kansas, masqueraded as saviors of the Union and upon the pretense that they were serving the cause thrived amazingly by pillaging the farmhouses and barns of neighboring counties in Missouri. Atchison was the headquarters of Cleveland's gang, the most active and the boldest of the banditti.

SUBDUING A DESPERADO.

"In the capacity of saviors of the Union they took upon themselves the task of driving all persons suspected of sympathy for 'the lost cause' out of Kansas.

"Tom Ray, proprietor of an extensive blacksmithing and wagon shop, was banished. In a month or two he returned, but not until after he had halted at Winthrop, a village opposite Atchison, and opened up negotiations which resulted in a grant of permission to remain in Atchison long enough to settle up his business and collect considerable sums due from his customers. He registered at the old Massasoit House, but did not tarry long. Major R. H. Weightman, an early settler, who left Atchison in 1861 and accepted a colonel's commission in the Confederate army, had been killed at Wilson's Creek.

"While sitting in the Massasoit House barroom Ray was approached by Sandy Corbin, a somewhat notorious character, who handled most of the horses stolen by Cleveland's thieves. Corbin mentioned Weightman's death, expressed satisfaction at his untimely end and applied to the dead man all the epithets known to the vocabulary of the abandoned. Ray expostulated and finally warned Corbin to desist or expect a thrashing. Corbin rushed to his room and returned with two revolvers so adjusted upon his belt that Ray could not help seeing them. Ray, who was a giant in size, seized Corbin, threw him face downward on a billiard table and with a blacksmith's hand as large as a ham spanked him until he was nearly insensible. Then he hurriedly boarded the ferryboat, crossed the river and made his way to Montana, where he lived until his death, which occurred recently.

"Cleveland's lieutenant, a fellow named Hartman, was the worst of the gang and was guilty of so many and such flagrant outrages upon prominent citizens that in sheer desperation four men, all of whom are now dead, met and drew straws to see who should kill Hartman (the last of these men died a year ago), Jesse C. Crall, during his life prominent in politics and business; George T. Challis, for thirty years a deacon in the Baptist church and a prominent wholesale merchant and identified prominently with Atchison affairs; James McEwen, a cattle buyer and butcher; the fourth man, a prominent physician.

"Each of these men had suffered intolerable outrages at the hands of Hartman. He had visited their houses and terrorized their wives. He had notified them that unless their husbands left Atchison within a specified period they would be mobbed. Even the children of two of the victims of persecution had been abused. They met at the physician's office and after a prolonged conference, at which it was agreed that neither would leave until Hartman had been killed, proceeded to draw straws to see which would undertake the work. Crall held the straws. McEwen drew the short straw, and the job fell to his lot.

"Atchison is bisected by two or three brooks, one of which traverses the northwest section of the town and runs into White Clay creek. This ravine had very precipitous banks and was crossed by several footbridges. At the east approach of one bridge was a tall elm tree. McEwen took his position under this tree and awaited the appearance of Hartman, who necessarily passed that way in going home at night. When Hartman was half way across the bridge, McEwen stepped out, dropped to his knee, leveled a double barreled shotgun and turned loose. He filled Hartman with buckshot from his head to his heels, but, strange to say, the fellow did not die for months.

"Soon afterward General Blount, then in command at Fort Leavenworth, twenty miles away, sent a company of cavalry to Atchison to deal with the gang. Just about daylight in the morning the soldiers reached Atchison. They were in the nick of time. A squad of Cleveland's thieves were crossing the river on the ice with half a dozen stolen horses. The soldiers lined up on the Kansas shore and ordered them to surrender. They made a break for liberty, and a pitched battle was fought. One of the fellows was killed, and, I think, one or two were wounded. The others were captured. Cleveland, hearing of the difficulty, mounted his horse and made for the interior of Kansas. On the way up Commercial street he came across Charley Holbert, city marshal. He placed a pistol to Holbert's head, accused him of having sent for the soldiers and marched him up the street for five or six squares. Then he whacked Holbert over the head with his gun and lit out. He was pursued to the Blue river country, 100 miles westward, and killed.

"The thieves who fell victims to Judge Lynch a few months later, while not known as members of the Cleveland gang, operated extensively throughout the period of lawlessness, in which no effort whatever was made to bring the outlaws to justice. After the Cleveland gang had been effectually broken up these predatory scoundrels continued their operations. Their last crime, and the one for which they were gibbeted, was the attempted robbery of an old man named Kelsey. They tortured the old man and his wife until they were nearly dead. The next morning hundreds of their neighbors swarmed into Atchison. The thieves got frightened and made a break for the country. They were rounded up and captured—four in all.

"Then ensued probably the most extraordinary proceeding known to the annals of Judge Lynch. The mob took possession of the jail and the courthouse and for a week held them. The prisoners were tried one by one. Sterling was convicted and executed. An elm tree standing on the banks of White Clear creek in the southwest quarter of the town was admirably suited to the purpose. When the wagon bearing Sterling to his doom reached the ground, the whole town was in attendance. A range of hills to the south was swarmed with women. Asa Barnes, a prominent farmer, a man of iron resolution and unswerving honesty, was the leader of the mob. With clinched teeth and blanched face he ordered Sterling to take his place on the seat of the wagon, and in a twinkling he was swung into eternity.

"The next day two others, a man named Brewer, a soldier at home on a furlough, and a young fellow known as Pony, met the same fate. There was much sympathy for Pony. He was a drunkard, and all his delinquencies were attributed to this weakness. Just as they were ready to swing him up two or three members of the mob told him that if he would give information as to others implicated, but who had not been arrested, they would save him. His reply was, 'I went into this thing as a man, and I will die like a man.'

"The fourth to suffer the vengeance of the mob was an old gray haired man named Moody.

"With the death of these four scoundrels lawlessness in that region came to an end. There was not a shadow of a doubt of their guilt. Three of the men died game. Brewer, who was a coward, whimpered and begged like a puppy. His cries for mercy could be heard a square."

CHINESE TYPESETTING.

The Celestial Compositor Has to Master 11,000 Characters.

Typesetting for a Chinese paper is a vastly different matter from typesetting for a journal in another language, for there are 11,000 characters in use. When one recalls the statement of Chinese sinologues that the sayings of Confucius require 7,000 characters, this seems to be a moderate estimate. The Chinese language is derived from 214 root words, which expand into the 4,000 or 5,000 words of daily use and the thirty odd thousand of the dictionary.

It requires 11,000 spaces to hold a font of Chinese type. The large cases, or false partitions, are ranged about the room and divided into spaces for each individual type, each a word complete in itself. A Chinese printer, it is estimated, can arrange 4,000 characters a day. The work has been carefully systematized, and the characters are arranged according to their formation. A simple character designates its group, and the elaboration of form is the elaboration of its meaning, as our terminatives and prefixes elaborate the root.

A division is devoted to the simple character that stands for "wood" and all of its amplifications. In this space or column are to be found "box," "bed," "plum tree" and so on through a long list of objects pertaining to or made of wood. Should an unusual word be needed, type is cut and delicately patched to make the required character. Comparing our combinations of twenty-six letters and ten figures, besides common symbols, an idea of the labor of a Chinese compositor can be formed.—Out West.

A Pointed Suggestion.

At a recent gathering which she attended she drew from her pocket her lace handkerchief, in which a knot had been tied in order to call to her mind some trivial duty.

"Dear me," said the popular young married lady to several gallants about her, "why is that knot in my handkerchief? I tied it there to remind me of something. What could it be?"

"My child," said an old lady who overheard her and who is noted for the acrid wittiness of her repartee, "it was probably tied in order to remind you that you are married."

Queer Coronation Custom.

One of the most extraordinary gifts made on the coronation day of Edward I. was that of 500 horses, which had been used by the royal princes and other personages in the procession to Westminster abbey. These horses, all richly caparisoned and harnessed just as they were, were let loose into the very midst of the mob after the banquet in Westminster hall that always succeeded a coronation in those days. The people in the streets were permitted to catch the animals, and to him who caught a horse it and its appointments belonged.—London Chronicle.

Coins of Early Days.

The early Biblical references to pieces of silver do not in the original convey the idea of coins, but of weights, shekels. The Mosaic "oblation to God" was a half shekel, and the shekel is explained by Josephus as equal to four Athenian drachmæ of a value of about 55½ cents in American money. The first Jewish coinage under authority was, it is believed, struck by Simon the Maccabee, about the year 140 B. C. It consisted of shekels and half shekels. This coinage had its value signified upon it, "Shekel Israel," in Samaritan characters.
